publisher's note

In the winter, Chicagoans tend to forget why we live here. But when the sun comes out and the weather warms up, something shifts—physically, mentally, emotionally, and even spiritually. That first sixty-degree day feels like a fresh start, as if the long, cold months never happened.

This year, our family spent spring break in San Diego. I feel incredibly blessed that my wife is the ultimate planner—carrying the mental load of every possible scenario that could arise on a trip. From packing snacks for the plane and planning kid-friendly activities to coordinating our rental car and carving out downtime each evening, she truly deserves a medal.

It was refreshing to step away from work for a week and be fully present with each other. One highlight was a day at LEGOLAND California—pure joy for all of us! It reminded me of something I hear often from our events: REALTORS® and Partners frequently express how much they appreciate that our platform offers a “break in the action.” This time of year is hectic, and having a space to unplug and connect is more valuable than ever.

We're so excited to see you at our spring event at Empire Burgers + Brew in Lombard on Thursday, May 22nd! We have a full buyout in the rooftop area for the afternoon from 1pm-4pm. You'll find all the details on page 28, and you can register using the QR code below.

Stana Vukajlovic

SET APART THROUGH SERVICE

BY LAUREN YOUNG • PHOTOS BY KDE PHOTOGRAPHY

“Service distinguishes you from the crowd,” says REALTOR® Stana Vukajlovic of Compass in Hinsdale. “Serve your clients well, and the returns are tenfold.”

Whether she is helping families find the perfect home or ensuring the best sale price for their existing home, Stana’s passion lies in making the entire experience stress-free and successful by putting her clients’ needs first. This deep-seated dedication was shaped by her upbringing, diverse career and personal experiences, and unwavering commitment to lifelong learning.

The eldest of six children, Stana was born into modest beginnings in urban Gary, Indiana. But life would provide her with experiences to give her an amazing perspective on the world and its people.

In addition to growing up within a melting pot of cultures in her youth, when her family later moved to a farm near Valparaiso, Stana experienced the stark contrast between a city and a rural lifestyle. Then, when she participated in a language immersion program at Indiana University, it sparked her love for travel, learning about other cultures first-hand, and her appreciation for diverse perspectives.

She found inspiration, support, and a strong sense of family in her large family. Her grandmother was one of her biggest influences—without knowing English, she bravely made her way to the US through Ellis Island to meet her future husband. Stana adds, “My grandmother and mother taught me to be open to new ideas and that if you do something, you should do it right. I hold those words to the highest standard in my work every day.”

While Vukajlovic values formal education, she says, “Book learning is great, but life experiences offer so much more. Talking and listening to people’s thoughts, lifestyles, and history gives you a better understanding of who they are.” Her unending curiosity about people makes her a great listener, which aids her in guiding clients to their perfect homes.

Stana’s professional career began in personal and corporate banking at UBS Chicago, where she gained a strong background in finance while learning the importance of financial decisions and planning for both families and corporations. She later transitioned to the real estate company LaSalle Partners (now JLL), where she worked in an administrative and presentation preparation role.

In 1989, following the birth of her son, Stefan, Stana entered the world of residential real estate. The decision was a natural one, knowing she could blend her background in finance, marketing, and customer service with her husband’s family’s home-building and renovation business. Also, real estate’s flexible schedule gave her the ability to remain deeply involved in her children and family’s lives.

No stranger to hard work and resilience, having been financially independent since the age of eighteen, Stana took on the challenges of entering the industry. Her career experiences and interest in helping people became both the leverage and foundation of her business. And her experiences with people from diverse backgrounds helped her understand that each client requires a fresh approach.

“Every client and family has their own unique circumstances, ideas, and perspectives, and their needs are diverse in an ever-changing market.

Navigating for the benefit of others is the best feeling. Knowing my clients have a special place to call home is the very best part of this business,” she says.

For Stana, family is at the heart of everything she does. She and her husband, Grad, and their three grown children—Stefan (35), Sonja (33), and Eva (24)—cherish the time they get to spend together—whether traveling, playing pickleball, attending festivals, or simply walking through the Fullersburg Woods forest preserve.

“Being together is what matters most,” Stana says. “We appreciate that simple joy, as well as spending time with extended family and friends.”

Stana is also deeply involved in her community. When she learned that her older daughter, Sonja, is on the autism spectrum, it fueled her passion for education and advocacy. She supports organizations like Aspire, which provides training and job placement for adults with disabilities.

That a high percentage of Stana’s business comes from repeat business and referrals is a testament to the exemplary service she provides her clients, who often become her friends.

Even after nearly thirty-five years in real estate, Stana has never stopped learning, and she recommends the same mindset to everyone, especially the agents she mentors. Along with exploring different cultures, she enjoys reading and engaging in discussions about history and education.

Looking ahead, Stana sees real estate as a continuation of her life’s work. “My future is based on my past—it’s a continuum,” she says. “Bringing security, joy, and success to others will always be at the core of my business and personal life.”

Her definition of success? “Doing what you love, bringing joy to others, and ensuring your family is happy.” For Stana’s clients, one thing is certain: “Their happiness is my joy.”

BRANDON BLANKENSHIP

The Man Behind a Mayoral Moniker

BY LAUREN YOUNG

“The harder you work, the luckier you get.” It’s a motto that REALTOR® Brandon Blankenship lives by—a reminder that success in real estate isn’t about shortcuts or secrets, but rather, grit, consistency, and staying the course.

The last time we spoke to Brandon in 2022, he was still learning the ropes, having recently transitioned into his new career in real estate and to a new market: not long before, he’d moved back home to the western suburbs. Since then, he’s leaned on the experiences of veteran agents and mentors to build his expertise and network. He’s also picked up some notable recognition for his results.

“I quickly realized that I loved being in control of my own success,” Brandon says of his early days as an agent. “There’s just something about real estate that allows you to build a life on your own terms if you’re willing to put in the work.”

In California, where Brandon earned his license right before the height of the pandemic, he got his start making cold calls. It was a crash course in resilience, salesmanship, and communication—skills that would serve him well when he moved back home to Chicagoland and committed himself to real estate full-time.

Like many new agents, Brandon faced the challenge of learning the business while trying to generate enough leads to survive. But he leaned on his finance background and sales experience, trusting that consistent action would build momentum.

“One of the biggest things I learned from the start is [the importance of] speed in implementation,” he says. “A lot of agents get caught up in learning and never take action. For me, it has been about trying things fast, figuring out which things I loved, and then doubling down on them.”

That mindset helped Brandon carve out a niche at Keller Williams Premier Properties in Glen Ellyn, where he blends his old-school work ethic with modern marketing savviness. Social media quickly became his greatest tool, not only for lead generation, but also for community building—Brandon takes pride in the fact that he's now known by many as “the unofficial mayor of Chicago’s suburbs” within his market.

“I went all in on social media when I got back to Chicagoland,” Brandon says. “It’s been a huge part of my business, and honestly, I just want to be the most-known person in the suburbs: my goal is to make our community a better place.”

Through Instagram, Facebook, and local engagement, he’s built a brand rooted in authenticity and connection—proof that showing up consistently pays off. His hard work was recognized on a national stage in 2024 when he made the National Association of REALTORS® “30 Under 30” list¹—a goal he’d chased from day one.

“For me, it’s never been just about sales volume,” he says. “It’s also been about being seen as an advocate for our industry. That achievement [making the list] validated all the work I’ve put in over the years.”

While his business continues to grow, Brandon remains focused on refining his craft and setting up a future built to last.

Brandon with his family.

Currently supported by a virtual assistant and a transaction coordinator, he plans to hire an executive assistant soon and eventually build out a full team.

Of course, scaling a business isn’t without its challenges. “Becoming a better leader is one of the hardest things I’ve faced,” he admits. “It’s a different skill set. Leading others is about helping them achieve their goals, too.”

Through it all, Brandon remains grounded by his long-term vision: to build not just a successful real estate business, but a legacy. But his personal goals have shifted as his business has grown—he’s thinking more about the family he hopes to have someday, and the role he wants to play in his loved ones’ lives.

“I’ve learned to work hard but to also live in the moment,” he says. “I want to get closer to my family, help others achieve their dreams, and really just enjoy the journey.”

In his downtime, Brandon allows himself more chances to live in the moment. He has developed a newfound appreciation for bourbon and for savoring the quiet moments that balance the fast pace of real estate. He’s also finding ways to give back through mentoring new agents and sharing his story in hopes of inspiring others.

“I want agents to see me and think, ‘If he can do it, I can do it,’” he says. “There’s no secret sauce to success. Just work hard, stay consistent, and believe in yourself.”

Looking ahead, Brandon envisions one day leading one of the top real estate teams in the Chicago suburbs that’s known not just for its great numbers, but for its great community impact. “My goal is to be seen as a public figure who is helping to build the Chicago suburbs up to their true potential,” he says, reflecting the heart behind his “unofficial mayor” moniker. “At the end of the day, it’s about making a difference in the place I call home.”

Mireille
Sabatini

Thriving in Confidence

“Do good and good will come back to you,” says REALTOR® Mireille Sabatini of Coldwell Banker in Hinsdale. It’s a philosophy she lives by and the mindset she brings to every client interaction. “People can feel authenticity when you are in it [this business] to truly help them and not just to close a quick sale.”

Mireille’s positive attitude was forged in not-so-easy circumstances. While she was growing up, “home” was often a temporary situation. After her parents divorced, she moved from Chicago to Canada, and then to Florida, before finally returning to the Midwest—all between the ages of eleven and fourteen. But those experiences cultivated her ability to connect with diverse communities—an asset that would later define her success in real estate.

“Home was just where my stuff was,” Mireille explains. “The security and importance that a home brings is why I give every client my all—so that they can find their family the perfect place to call home.”

Because her mother had to work so much to support the family, Mireille was often charged with finding and securing their living arrangements. She would meet with landlords and finalize leases — all without them realizing she was only fifteen. Ever the overachiever, Mireille graduated high school in three years and obtained a pharmacy technician license before exploring a few career options.

“I’ve worked in my family’s flower shop business, in the pharmacy at a Walgreens, and I was a top seller for Nordstrom, regularly traveling to top US locations,” says Mireille. “Ultimately, I decided to help others achieve their goals and secure their financial futures, and that led me into real estate.”

I NEVER MAKE EXCUSES...I SUCCEED IN STRESS WHEREAS MANY OTHERS FOLD. I AM LIKE A FLOWER: I BLOOM IN THE MUD AND DIRT.”

While taking her real estate licensing classes in 2019, Mireille discovered she was expecting her first child. Determined to build a future that would allow her the flexibility to be present for her growing family, she officially entered real estate in May 2021—right in the middle of one of the most competitive housing markets in recent history. Navigating such a chaotic time in the industry as a new agent was no easy feat, but Mireille thrives in high-pressure situations.

“I never make excuses,” she says. “I succeed in stress whereas many others fold. I am like a flower: I bloom in the mud and dirt.”

Part of Mireille’s bustling environment is her growing family. In just five years, she has had four children—Enzo (4), Luciano (3), Eliza (2), and her newborn, Santino—all while buying and selling three of her own homes and expanding her business. Drawing on her background in sales and customer service, she has quickly built a reputation for her ability to find creative solutions and for her unwavering commitment to her clients’ needs, all while juggling her own busy life.

“I just take it a day at a time and focus on what is right in front of me,” she says.

If she wasn’t busy enough, Mireille is deeply involved in her community. She supports Ruby Whiskers Animal Rescue in Lemont; and takes pride in her ability to connect with Spanish-speaking clients and neighbors, thanks to her fluency in both Spanish and English. At home, she and her husband, Joseph, prioritize family time, whether it’s playing games, enjoying the outdoors, or simply watching movies and cuddling on the couch with their kids and their English bulldog, Olive.

Looking ahead, Mireille has no plans of slowing down. She envisions expanding her expertise by earning additional designations, and eventually, obtaining her managing broker’s license.

“For now, I will continue to excel in what I am good at and enjoy what I have built thus far,” she says. “At the end of the day, you can make all the money in the world, but if you are not doing what you love and loving what you do, you will not be happy.”

Mireille is clearly fulfilling her definition of success, which, as she says, is overall happiness.
