PUBLISHER'S NOTE

In the winter, Chicagoans tend to forget why we live here. But when the sun comes out and the weather warms up, something shifts—physically, mentally, emotionally, and even spiritually. That first sixty-degree day feels like a fresh start, as if the long, cold months never happened.

This year, our family spent spring break in San Diego. I feel incredibly blessed that my wife is the ultimate planner—carrying the mental load of every possible scenario that could arise on a trip. From packing snacks for the plane and planning kid-friendly activities to coordinating our rental car and carving out downtime each evening, she truly deserves a medal.

It was refreshing to step away from work for a week and be fully present with each other. One highlight was a day at LEGOLAND California—pure joy for all of us! It reminded me of something I hear often from our events: REALTORS® and Partners frequently express how much they appreciate that our platform offers a “break in the action.” This time of year is hectic, and having a space to unplug and connect is more valuable than ever.

We're so excited to see you at our spring event at Studio41 in Palatine on Wednesday, May 21st, from 1pm-4pm! Come see and hear about the latest design trends hitting the North Shore in 2025. Food and beverages are provided. You'll find all the details on page 38, and you can register using the QR code to the right.

Diane Jamieson

A Heart for Hospitality

For Diane Jamieson, real estate is more than transactions—it’s about creating a welcoming experience, guiding people through life’s biggest transitions with warmth, care, and expertise. At the heart of her success is a passion she’s had since childhood: hospitality.

Growing up in a small town in Northwest Indiana, Diane watched her parents turn their home into a place where people felt valued. They hosted gatherings with meticulous attention to detail: fine china set just right, guests’ favorite drinks on hand, and an atmosphere that made everyone feel special. She loved being a part of it all, preparing for the guests and seeing the joy it brought them. It was an early lesson in how meaningful it is to make people feel at home.

But when it came time to choose a career, she took a more traditional path, earning a business degree from Purdue University. “At the time, I didn’t realize you could do something you loved and support yourself,” she says. “Looking back, I would have chosen a degree in hospitality.”

Instead, Diane built a strong career in finance and project management. Her first job after graduation was with Ernst & Whinney (which later became Ernst & Young), where she spent two years in public accounting, gaining a solid foundation in financial analysis and business operations. She then transitioned to Solo Cup Company (Dart/Solo), where she spent the next decade.

It wasn’t until she stepped away from the corporate world to raise their two children that she rediscovered her passion for people and community. Through leadership roles in school PTAs, fundraising efforts, and local youth sports programs, she built strong relationships and found joy in organizing events that brought people together. When she was ready to return to work, real estate felt like a natural extension of what she had always loved: creating spaces where people could build their lives.

“Success is being able to help someone get to their next chapter in a smooth, reliable manner, sans drama.”

Diane began her real estate career in 2006 at a boutique firm, quickly realizing that no two transactions were ever the same. Over time, she found her home at Baird & Warner, where she thrives in a family-owned business culture that prioritizes relationships over transactions.

Her ability to remain calm under pressure and navigate complex situations has made her a trusted advisor. She recalls a particularly stressful transaction where a significant issue arose just before closing. Though the process took longer than expected, her persistence paid off. “Cool heads prevail,” she says. “Although everything was delayed, both my seller and the buyer were over-the-moon at the closing table.”

For Diane, success isn’t measured by the number of transactions closed; it’s about how she helps people realize the lifestyle of their dreams. “Success is being able to help someone get to their next chapter in a smooth, reliable manner, sans drama,” she says.

Outside of real estate, Diane’s world revolves around family. She and her husband, Scott, met at Purdue and their children are alums, too. Their son, Ryan, recently married his wife, Bergen, and they now live in St. Louis with their puppy, Penny. Their daughter, Kathryn, followed in her mother’s hospitality footsteps and has a career rooted in care: she works as a pediatric cancer nurse at Ann and Robert H. Lurie Children’s Hospital of Chicago.

In their free time, Diane and Scott enjoy traveling, spending time outdoors, and making the most of what their community has to offer. They love visiting the city, trying new restaurants, biking, and playing pickleball.

Their home has always been a reflection of their love for gathering, and their recent two-year renovation project has made entertaining even more seamless. The reconfigured first floor was designed with hospitality in mind. Diane now appreciates the renovation process even more after experiencing it firsthand. “Going through it myself gave me a whole new level of understanding when I talk to clients about home improvements,” she says.

Diane also dedicates her time to giving back. She serves as a special events commissioner for the Village of Arlington Heights, helping to organize free community events throughout the year. She is also a strong supporter of Lurie Children’s Hospital, inspired by the work her daughter does there.

Through all of it, Diane remains grounded in gratitude. On the tough days, she reminds herself how fortunate she is to have the encouragement and support of her husband, Scott, who enabled her to build a career that allows her to serve others. And if that doesn’t do the trick, she thinks about her dream trip to Bora Bora, a place she hopes to visit with her family someday.

Diane’s passion for hospitality hasn’t changed—whether she’s helping a family find the perfect home, guiding clients through a major transition, or welcoming guests into her own home, she does it all with the same warmth and care she learned from her parents.

Diane with her husband, Scott.

MATTHEW F. HOWETH & HOWETH LAW, LLC

BY CHRIS MENEZES

BRINGING CLARITY, CONFIDENCE, & CHEER TO REAL ESTATE LAW

For many, the legal side of a real estate transaction feels like an afterthought—until something goes wrong. That’s where Matthew F. Howeth comes in. As the founding partner of Howeth Law, LLC, he has built a practice that prioritizes clear communication, strong client relationships, and a seamless closing experience. But what truly sets him apart is his approach: while real estate transactions are serious, they don’t have to be stressful.

“I try to bring a sense of calm to the transaction, which I think makes all the difference,” Matthew says. “Real estate involves high stakes, but it can and should be a positive experience. If I can bring some warmth and compassion to the experience, I know I’m doing my job right.” His ability to blend professionalism with approachability has made him a trusted partner for buyers, sellers, and top-producing agents alike.

With a background in litigation, Matthew saw firsthand how legal disputes could complicate people’s lives. That experience shaped his approach when he transitioned into real estate law. “I wanted to be on the proactive side of things—helping people navigate the legal aspects of buying or selling a home before problems arise,” he says. “Real estate transactions don’t have to be overwhelming. When people feel informed and protected, they can move forward with confidence.”

His firm, Howeth Law, LLC, specializes in residential and commercial real estate, serving clients throughout Lake, Cook, McHenry, DuPage, and other surrounding counties. The team at Howeth Law is noted for their commitment to responsiveness and transparency. “A lot of the frustration in this industry comes from poor communication. My team and I make sure that never happens,” he explains. “We work closely with buyers, sellers, and agents to ensure that every step of the transaction is smooth and efficient. Our goal is to be more than just a legal service—we want to be a trusted partner in the process.”

One of the firm’s defining principles is its agent-first approach. “We see our agents as our clients, too,” Matthew says. “They need a legal team that works with them, not just their buyers and sellers. We take care of the details so the agent can focus on the next transaction.”

Outside of work, Matthew finds fulfillment in time spent with his family. He and his wife, Kristin, who is also an attorney, stay busy with their two kids, Jordyn (a sixth grader) and Caleb (a third grader), and their dog, Hank. Coaching Jordyn’s travel basketball team has become a special way for father and daughter to bond, talking about sports, friends, and life. Caleb loves to play soccer and golf, and he loves watching and playing both sports with his dad.

Music is one of Matthew’s passions. A longtime Pearl Jam fan, he has attended countless concerts of theirs over the years. He says, “Live music has always been a huge part of my life, and now I get to share that with my kids. We’ve been to concerts together, including The Killers and AJR. It’s been fun watching them develop their own taste in music.”

“WE SEE OUR AGENTS AS OUR CLIENTS, TOO. THEY NEED A LEGAL TEAM THAT WORKS WITH THEM, NOT JUST THEIR BUYERS AND SELLERS. WE TAKE CARE OF THE DETAILS SO THE AGENT CAN FOCUS ON THE NEXT TRANSACTION.”

When it comes to success, Matthew believes in balance. “Financial stability is important, but it’s not the only measure of success. It’s about being present for my family, practicing gratitude, and making sure I’m not just working but also enjoying the life I’ve built,” he shares.

Looking ahead, Matthew wants to see better communication across the real estate industry. “Deals fall apart all the time because of miscommunication. If everyone in this industry made clear, responsive communication a priority, transactions would be a lot smoother. That’s what we focus on: keeping things efficient and client-centered,” he says.

Justin Greenberg

Leading with Heart, Growing with Intention

When Justin Greenberg thinks about the future, he doesn't just see homes: he sees legacies, families putting down roots, agents discovering their stride, and a team that's more than just productive—it's purposeful. And that's exactly what he's built with the JG Group.

Over the last few years, Justin's business has grown from a solid foundation into a powerhouse presence in Chicago's northern suburbs. Since his last feature, the team has more than doubled its transaction count, expanded to five full-time brokers, and found a new home at Jameson Sotheby's International Realty.

In 2024 alone, the JG Group closed over $32 million across 89 transactions—with even bigger goals on the horizon.

"This year, we're aiming for $50 million and 150 to 180 transactions," Justin says. "But it's not just about the numbers; it's about sustainability, quality service, and helping everyone on the team grow their business in a meaningful way."

Justin's path to real estate was personal. He started out as a caddie at a local country club—not just learning golf etiquette, but the power of networking, professionalism, and high-level service.

That early experience still shapes how he shows up in business: with hustle, humility, and an unwavering commitment to people.

His team mirrors that same ethos. Beth Danner, a former pastry chef, brings precision and warmth to every transaction. Ricky Sakoda, also with a culinary background, offers steadiness and empathy. Elizabeth Pavalon, a charter boat captain and former fashion model, brings tenacity and flair. Jack Wiley, the newest addition, shares Justin's roots in the country club caddie system, and brings investment experience to the team. Finally, Carrie Greenberg—Justin’s wife and full-time special ed teacher—keeps the team’s social media buzzing in her spare time.

“We’ve built a team where everyone supports one another...We celebrate each other’s wins, pitch in when it’s needed, and treat every client like family.”

“We’ve built a team where everyone supports one another,” Justin says. “There are no egos here. We celebrate each other’s wins, pitch in when it’s needed, and treat every client like family—no matter what or where they’re buying.”

That philosophy was tested with a recent client who went under contract nine times—each time backing out, changing their mind, and even switching locations. But instead of burning out, the JG Group rotated roles, leaned on each other, and stuck it out. “No one got frustrated. Everyone stepped up with grace. That’s who we are,” Justin affirms.

Justin’s personal priorities have shifted since he became a dad. With a five-year-old son, Jaxon, and a two-year-old daughter, Rylynn, he’s more focused than ever on work-life balance. He and Carrie have been playing a lot of pickleball recently, and with Jaxon in hockey, Justin is spending more time on the ice.

Looking ahead, Justin is focused on laying the groundwork for sustainable, long-term growth. His vision for the JG Group includes expanding to a tight-knit team of seven to nine people—of whom six or seven will be full-time agents—and building out a strong support staff to elevate client service and engagement. “It’s about creating the right systems and processes now so that we’re set up for success for years to come,” he says.

He also hopes to step into the development side of real estate—a longtime passion rooted in his artistic background and love for design. “It would get my creative juices flowing and allow me to build something tangible—something my kids could be a part of one day,” he says. For Justin, brokerages and new development go hand in hand: “It’s a business model that not only supports our clients, but also contributes to the long-term health of the local housing market.”

Whether it’s luxury listings, first-time buyers, or developing communities the JG Group’s mission remains the same: help people. With backgrounds in hospitality, education, fashion, and medicine, Justin’s team is proof that the heart of real estate isn’t the transaction; it’s the service—the steady guidance, the trust built, and the belief that what you do can matter deeply to someone else.

“We all got into this business to make a difference,” Justin says. “We’re serious about helping people—and we have fun doing it.” That fun shows up in everything from team outings to working lunches to the steady stream of inside jokes during meetings.

So what’s next? Continued growth—with intention. And maybe a few more closings squeezed in between hockey practice and a competitive round of pickleball or golf. Because for Justin, it’s not just about building a business; it’s about building a life that feels just as good as it looks.

ALEXANDER RESENDIZ

Building a Legacy, One Home at a Time

For Alex Resendiz, challenges are stepping stones, not barriers. Whether it was managing a diagnosis of type 1 diabetes at the age of ten, competing as an elite gymnast, or starting a real estate career at just twenty-one, Alex has always faced life with resilience and ambition. Now, at twenty-five, he's turning those qualities into a thriving career at Compass Real Estate, proving that hard work and determination are the ultimate keys to success.

Born in Lake Forest and raised in Zion, Illinois, Alex grew up in a low-income community without a clear roadmap to success. "Coming from a place where guidance on how to 'make it out' wasn't readily available, I've always looked up to hardworking people who built something from nothing," he shares. That perspective shaped Alex's relentless drive, teaching him that hard work can outperform even the strongest network over time.

Alex's tenacity was evident from a young age. Diagnosed with type 1 diabetes at age ten, he learned early on how to face challenges head-on. "I've never overcome diabetes," he says, "but I've made a commitment to manage it to the best of my ability."

That same dedication extended into his athletic pursuits. As a competitive gymnast from age eight to eighteen, Alex trained and competed at the national level, earning recognition as an elite gymnast and even training at the US Olympic and Paralympic Training Center in Colorado. But injuries—including broken heels, crushed growth plates, and a torn rotator cuff—cut his gymnastics career short and forced him to pivot.

After high school, Alex attended the University of Nebraska–Lincoln, where he studied finance and accounting. But his vision for the future began to shift more toward real estate, something that interested him even as a kid. "I would build with LEGOs and dream about becoming an architect," he recalls. "Later, I wanted to be an accountant and invest in real estate." In December 2019, Alex decided to leave college and obtain his real estate license.

Since joining Compass in 2020, Alex has become known for his adaptability and dedication. Licensed in both Illinois and Wisconsin, he serves clients in the city, suburbs, and beyond, earning their trust by combining professionalism, local knowledge, and a client-first approach. "Real estate is about so much more than transactions," he says. "It's about educating people and genuinely helping them find the perfect property, whether it's their first home, their third, or an investment."

One of the challenges Alex has faced is being young in an industry where experience and trust are critical. "It's hard when you're twenty-five and most people your age aren't buying homes," he admits. "But I've focused on being knowledgeable, professional, and personable. Expanding my reach outside of my immediate network has been key."

“Success is being loved & respected by your clients, family, and friends.”

Alex’s philosophy is rooted in constant growth. He’s passionate about being better every day: more knowledgeable, more professional, more successful. That commitment has already paid off, as clients and coworkers alike recognize him as a “jack of all trades” who brings value to every interaction.

Outside of work, Alex finds joy in life’s simple pleasures. He and his fiancée, Aurora, love traveling, finding new restaurants, and spending time outdoors with their dog, Tyson. “Tyson is fearless,” he says, laughing. “We love hiking together.” But Alex is excited for a new chapter, fatherhood, as he and Aurora happily welcome their first child, Landon, into their lives.

For Alex, success isn’t just about financial freedom; it’s about making an impact. “Success is being loved and respected by your clients, family, and friends,” he says. “It’s having the freedom to help and serve the people around you, whether they need advice, support, or someone to lean on.”

Alex with his fiancée, Aurora.

Alex’s first born, Landon.

When asked what advice he’d give to aspiring top producers, Alex is straightforward: “Hard work outperforms networking in the long run. Consistency, effort, and integrity are what set you apart.”

Whether he’s helping clients navigate their real estate journey or planning his next adventure with his family, Alex’s unwavering drive and passion for growth continue to push him forward. “Failing is harder than trying,” he says. With that mindset, it’s clear that Alex is building a legacy not just in real estate but in life—one step, one connection, and one home at a time.
