MIADONNA

Elegantly Crafted. Timelessly Beautiful.

BY KERRY HINRICHS

For two decades, MiaDonna has been helping people celebrate life's milestones with diamonds that are as beautiful as they are responsible. Founded in Portland with a vision to reimagine jewelry for the modern era, MiaDonna became the world's first retailer to exclusively sell lab-grown diamonds—offering a stunning, sustainable, and ethical alternative to mined stones. By combining innovation, craftsmanship, and integrity, MiaDonna empowers shoppers to celebrate life's most meaningful moments without compromise.

MiaDonna's lab-grown diamonds are every bit as real as mined ones—identical in beauty, sparkle, and durability—yet grown in a way that's kinder to the earth. Using advanced technology, these diamonds grow from carbon seeds in a controlled lab environment that replicates nature's process. Each is carefully graded by The Four C's—Cut, Clarity, Color, and Carat—to meet the highest standards of beauty and quality. Every MiaDonna diamond comes with an independent certification from GIA, IGI, or GCAL, ensuring shoppers feel confident in both authenticity and value.

SHINE ALL SEASON

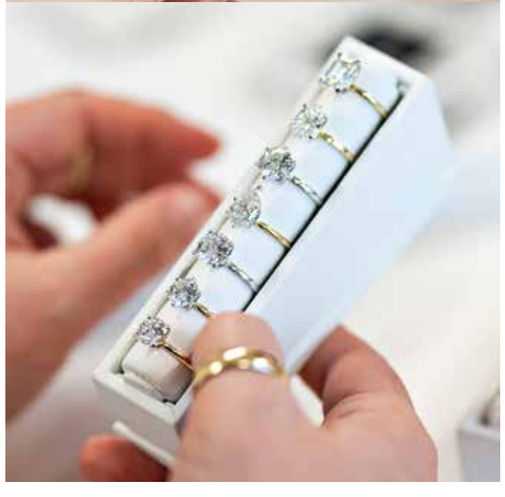

With the winter holidays approaching, MiaDonna is shining bright with special offerings for engagements, gifts, and celebrations. Sales Director Justine Elliott loves helping shoppers find the perfect pieces, noting that timeless picks like hoops and stud earrings are foolproof choices for the season. "They just never go out of style and make you feel so special," she says. "I always remind customers that diamonds are made to be worn, and earrings are especially easy to integrate into any look, every day."

Since 2007, MiaDonna has been part of Portland's most meaningful celebrations—engagements, weddings, anniversaries, and every milestone in between. From engagement rings to wedding bands to timeless earrings and necklaces, their elegant designs blend modern style with classic craftsmanship. MiaDonna also designs bespoke and fully custom engagement rings, as well as made-to-order and ready-to-wear pieces, perfect for holiday gifting or marking any milestone.

At MiaDonna, shopping is effortless—whether you're visiting in person at Bridgeport Village or browsing online. With complimentary engraving, flexible financing, and free shipping and returns, every detail is designed to make the experience joyful. Since moving to their Bridgeport Village location in November 2024, MiaDonna has welcomed shoppers both in-person and online at miadonna.com, providing a seamless experience that reflects each customer's values and personal story.

What truly sets MiaDonna apart is the heart behind every piece. As a certified B Corp, the company is committed to protecting the planet while celebrating love and connection. Through its partnership with ecodrive, each order helps plant trees—including hundreds right here in Oregon—so every purchase gives back.

As modern consumers increasingly value ethics alongside beauty, MiaDonna continues to lead the way in lab-grown diamonds. By combining responsible innovation with timeless design, the company creates jewelry that celebrates personal milestones while honoring a mindful, sustainable future.

"We love being at Bridgeport Village! The community is so welcoming, and we've made so many new friends since arriving. It has certainly opened our visibility to Lake Oswego residents, and we love helping everyone who walks in our doors walk out with something spectacular," shares Justine.

MiaDonna is proud to create pieces that make every celebration brighter and every milestone unforgettable.

Earning Every Step Forward

Alison Derse

BY KERRY HINRICHS

> It might be a regular Tuesday for me, but it's their everything. So I try to meet them with extra care and calm."

When Alison Derse launched her real estate career in September 2019, she couldn't have predicted the year ahead. Just a few months in, the pandemic upended daily life, forcing her to build her career in isolation—without open houses, broker tours, or in-person mentorship. But in many ways, the timing mirrored her approach. Alison rarely takes the conventional route. Her pivot into real estate wasn't accidental—it was intentional, scrappy, and fueled by a deep belief in building something meaningful from the ground up.

Originally from Los Angeles, Alison built a fast-paced career in San Francisco's startup world, working in business development and marketing at companies like Yelp, Trulia, and Instacart. There, she learned to problem-solve without a roadmap, stay agile, and wear multiple hats—early training that laid the groundwork for what came next.

By 2016, she and her husband Sam were ready for a slower pace, and Portland held that promise. "We didn't know many people or have meaningful ties to the city," Alison says. "But we moved here for the lifestyle—to start our family in a place that felt more grounded than the Bay Area."

As she settled in, Alison considered what had always lit her up professionally—building trust, crafting strategy, and guiding people through uncertainty. Real estate, she realized, wasn't just about homes—it was about helping people navigate life transitions with intention. With a degree in American Studies from UC Davis, she was also fascinated by the psychology behind why people spend in the ways they do.

Launching a career during a global pandemic wasn't easy. "It felt like learning to ski in a snowstorm," she jokes. Without a network or playbook, Alison relied on creative problem-solving and human connection. She used social media to share her Portland experience—highlighting neighborhoods, architecture, and parks, and articulating the "why" behind her move. Her authenticity struck a chord, especially with others seeking a fresh start.

With no built-in client base, she built her business brick by brick—driven, self-taught, and fueled by heart. Her early days were defined by grit, hustle, and commitment to the long game. In just five years, Alison has closed more than 100 transactions—an impressive milestone in a new city. But her proudest metric is relationships. Clients return, refer, and stay connected because they know she's in it for more than the transaction. "Clients work with me because they feel seen and understood, not sold to," Alison says. "They trust that I understand what matters most to them."

A recent client story sticks with her. A family relocating from Southern California had lost everything in the Altadena wildfire—while expecting their second child. “Helping them start over in Portland, in a gorgeous 1930s home full of charm and potential, was an absolute honor,” Alison shares. “Real estate is about transitions, resilience, and the hope people carry when they begin again.” That family rebuilt their life—and welcomed a baby—starting a new chapter filled with joy.

Moments like that ground her in her “why.” Her success isn’t about shortcuts or scripts—it’s about showing up consistently, solving problems creatively, and adapting to meet people where they are. That resourceful spirit—honed in the startup world and refined through real estate—has been the common thread throughout her career.

She approaches each transaction with empathy and strategy. Her tech background taught her to ask the right questions and challenge assumptions. “Real estate isn’t one-size-fits-all,” she says. “I don’t follow someone else’s script. It works best when you make it your own.”

Today, Alison balances her growing business with an active family life in Eastmoreland. Sam, who has more than 20 years of experience in commercial real estate investments, remains a supportive sounding board. Their children, Henry (7) and Margot (3), are her proudest accomplishments—and an unexpected asset in her business. Knowing the best neighborhood parks or post-tour ice cream spots gives Alison a unique connection with her clients. She often meets clients at playgrounds, strollers and snacks in tow—meeting people where they are, because that’s where she is too.

Juggling it all isn’t always easy. One challenge, she says, is remembering that her clients are often at peak stress. “It might be a regular Tuesday for me, but it’s their everything,” she says. “So I try to meet them with extra care and calm.”

Outside of work, Alison loves hosting friends for dinner, exploring Portland by way of food trucks and top-notch restaurants, or hunting down the best neighborhood jungle gym with her kids (Sellwood Park’s slide currently takes the crown). She is grateful for the flexibility to show up for her kids’ activities, and to volunteer in their school. She also enjoys fashion, interior design, art, Pilates, supporting small local businesses and restaurants, and hiking the area’s magical trails.

Her advice for future top producers? “Don’t try to be someone else. Lead with who you are, and make your clients an authentic part of your community. That’s when this work feels truly fulfilling and less like a J-O-B.”

And to her 18-year-old self, she’d say: “You don’t need a perfect plan. Just stay curious, work hard, and trust your instincts. Protect your energy—it's your most valuable resource. The right opportunities and people will find you when you lead with clarity and heart.”

That intentionality has been Alison’s North Star—from career pivots to parenting—as she continues to build a business and a life deeply rooted in who she is.

METKE

Remodeling & Luxury Homes

BY KERRY HINRICHS

A Family Legacy of Craftsmanship and Vision

For more than 36 years, Metke Remodeling & Luxury Homes has set the standard for design-build excellence in the Portland area. What began as a small finish carpentry subcontractor has evolved into one of the region's premier design build firms, known for delivering spaces that are as functional as they are breathtaking.

Founded by Jeff and Teresa Metke, the business has grown into a true family enterprise. Their son-in-law, Nick Metke, now plays a key leadership role, marking the beginning of a generational transition. The family's collective vision is anchored in their mission: Elevating the Art of the Home.

Comprehensive Design-Build Expertise

Metke offers a full suite of services for high-end residential remodeling and custom home construction. From whole-home remodels and kitchen and bath renovations to luxury additions, outdoor living spaces, and new custom builds, their in-house architecture and interior design team work hand-in-hand with the construction crew. This seamless integration means every project benefits from a unified vision, consistent communication, and meticulous attention to detail.

Distinctive Approach

The Metke philosophy is simple: they're not just building spaces—they're enhancing people's lives through the transformation of their homes. Every detail is intentional, from layout to finishes, resulting in spaces that feel personalized and timeless. This approach has earned them a loyal following and an impressive portfolio of projects that speak for themselves.

Community Commitment

As a locally owned, family-driven business, the Metkes are deeply connected to the Lake Oswego and greater Portland community. They actively support local causes such as youth sports, the Special Olympics, and Doernbecher Children's Hospital. They also prioritize working with local trades and artisans, helping to strengthen the regional economy and preserve craftsmanship.

Navigating Industry Challenges

Like many in construction, Metke has faced challenges in recent years, from supply chain delays to labor shortages. Their strategy? Proactive planning, transparent communication, and long-standing relationships with trusted partners. By setting clear expectations and maintaining flexibility, they've not only weathered challenges but used them as opportunities to grow stronger as a team.

Looking Ahead

The future of Metke Remodeling & Luxury Homes is bright. With a generational leadership shift underway, they're blending fresh energy and ideas with the proven standards that have defined the business for decades. The team continues to expand, innovate, and seek new ways to add value for clients—while staying true to the family values that are the heart of the company.

Client Praise

Clients describe the Metke experience as "top of class," citing unmatched craftsmanship, attention to detail, and clear communication—emphasizing craftsmanship that far exceeds expectations. One client summed it up perfectly: "Quit looking and get to work." Metke Remodeling and Luxury Homes continues to set the benchmark for luxury living—creating spaces where beauty, comfort, and connection thrive among family values and inspired design.

Stacy Hartzler's

Leap of Faith

BY KERRY HINRICHS

In 2015, Stacy Hartzler was working two jobs—full time as an orthodontic assistant and on nights and weekends behind the bar. She balanced both roles for years, putting in seven days a week just to make ends meet. When a request for a single day off was denied despite more than 100 hours of accrued vacation, she realized her life had become unsustainable. That turning point gave her the courage to walk away from the only steady career she had known.

With no fixed plan but a determination to find something different, Stacy began meeting with people who worked for themselves. She asked questions not just about freedom and flexibility, but about the unseen responsibilities of self-employment—things like retirement planning and health insurance. One of those conversations was with her own REALTOR®, who surprised her with an invitation—get licensed and join the business. Stacy laughed at the suggestion, certain she was not a salesperson, but curiosity and the need for change nudged her forward. She promised herself she would give it a year.

While still working full time, she studied and sat for the exam. In February 2016, she was licensed. By May, she was helping her first client, and by the end of the year she had guided seven families into new homes. That one-year experiment proved to be the pivotal moment that set her on a path toward long-term fulfillment.

Nearly a decade later, Stacy still considers her career one of the best decisions she's made. Real estate, she explains, is as much about navigating challenges as it is about celebrating successes. One of the hardest parts is cutting through the noise of misinformation online. "The internet gives us lots of information, but it's not always correct," she says. "The biggest challenge is being the expert in the field and helping people understand how the market is actually performing—especially now, when many still have expectations from the COVID market." With ten years of experience, she has seen market cycles come and go, and that perspective allows her to keep clients grounded in uncertain times.

Her business is built entirely by referral—something she never set out to create but which has become the foundation of her work. She credits consistency for that success. "Find the thing you're good at and refine it until you can't go wrong," she advises. “Lots of agents jump from one thing to the next in search of another deal. Just be consistent in whatever you do, and keep it simple.”

For Stacy, clients often become friends, and her greatest joy comes from connecting on a meaningful level. She’s been invited to family milestones and, in some cases, even named in wills as the trusted person to handle a home sale. “It’s incredibly humbling,” she says. “Building trusting relationships brings me so much joy.”

Equally important to her is the belief that peers in the business are collaborators rather than rivals. “Other agents are not your competition—there’s so much business to go around. Learn from others and be collaborative. It goes a lot further than being competitive.”

Stacy and her partner, David, recently moved to Happy Valley, where they are raising his two children, ages seven and eleven. She embraces her role as a “bonus parent” and also treasures time with her sister, her three nieces, and her retired father. When she’s away from work, she gravitates toward reading, working out, traveling, and trips to the beach. She also enjoys home remodeling, a passion she keeps as a personal creative outlet rather than a professional pursuit.

Looking back, Stacy often thinks about the advice she would give her younger self—don’t let work define your life, and don’t be afraid to say yes. “Work is work, but that’s not even close to what life is about,” she reflects. “Say yes to more things than you say no to—it’s a big world out there.” That perspective has shaped not only her career, but her approach to life overall.

What began as a leap into the unknown has become a career marked by resilience, steady growth, and trust. The year she promised herself turned into so much more—a future she never expected and one she holds with deep gratitude.
