LUKE with Coldwell Banker Realty

LUTHER

BUILDING TRUST, ONE RELATIONSHIP AT A TIME

In an industry where volume often drowns out value, Luke Luther stands apart—not by shouting louder, but by showing up with heart, grit, and a genuine commitment to people. As the founder of Luther Group Real Estate at Coldwell Banker Realty, Luke has built a thriving business by doing what many forget in the hustle: listening, caring, and treating every client like family.

“I didn’t plan on being here,” Luke admits with quiet honesty. “It started part-time. A friend asked for help, then another... and it snowballed.” What began as a side interest turned into a full-fledged career fueled by purpose. Fast forward, and Luke has closed over $100 million in real estate, with $17 million last year and already $19 million in 2024—proof that authenticity and connection never go out of style.

Cincinnati Proud

A Cincinnati native, Luke grew up in Indian Hill and Kenwood, where his family has lived for three generations. He attributes his work ethic to his Mom, Jane, who was forced to raise his brother and he at a young age as a single parent. He attended Indian Hill Schools before earning a dual degree in Finance and Operations Management from Miami University. Though he came from a small business background, his early career took him into the corporate world, working for nearly a decade in Chicago as a project manager for a pension firm and then one of the largest global banks.

“It got to the point where I would’ve had to move overseas and didn’t love the work,” he recalls. “That didn’t align with the life I wanted. I’ve always had an entrepreneurial side—I wanted to carve my own path.”

He obtained his real estate license in 2011 to handle personal transactions. But by 2015, it was clear this was more than a side gig. “It gave me job flexibility, the ability to add value, and the opportunity to do something I enjoyed,” he says.

Luke’s approach is deeply relationship-driven. “I treat every client like they’re a member of my family,” he says. “This business isn’t just about closings—it’s about making sure people feel supported every step of the way.”

As his business grew, so did his team. Over the past year and a half, Luke formed The Luther Group Real Estate, bringing on trusted colleagues like Leslie Graham, a former coworker from the brokerage, and Tom Flemming, a fellow entrepreneur with a passion for real estate. Together, they’ve created a collaborative environment that balances professional excellence with personal flexibility. “We’re all in the same boat—building something meaningful while still showing up for our families.”

Overcoming Obstacles

Behind the success, Luke has faced real-life challenges with quiet strength. When his wife, Katie, was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2022, the real estate community stepped in to support them. The agent community helped cover my business and even brought meals to our family while he took time away. “It reminded me why relationships matter,” he shares. “There’s no one way to do this business. For me, it’s about people first.” Now, with Katie doing well, the two give back by helping others facing similar struggles through the Karen Wellington Foundation and being advocates for routine cancer screenings. Early detection saved his wife’s life.

“IT GAVE ME JOB FLEXIBILITY, THE ABILITY TO ADD VALUE, AND THE OPPORTUNITY TO DO SOMETHING I ENJOYED.”

Luke’s experience has shaped his perspective. “Life is short. Spend time on what you enjoy. The money will follow.” That personal philosophy isn’t just something he says—it’s something he’s lived. “A father figure and mentor once told me, ‘You’ll have a lot of opportunities to make money. But your integrity can leave you quickly.’ That stuck with me.”

And when it comes to effort and follow-through, Luke puts it simply as spoken by Rip Wheeler: “It’s hard to measure ‘almost,’ because ‘almost’ doesn’t matter.” That belief drives his meticulous, high-touch service—and it’s why so many of his clients become repeat clients, and friends for life.

Luke is also passionate about real estate beyond the MLS. In addition to traditional sales, he works on off-market resale opportunities and helps builders and investors scout land and development opportunities. It’s a natural extension of his love for strategy and macroeconomics. “Even if I wasn’t in real estate, I’d be putting deals together somewhere. I love it.”

Fueled by Family

Family remains his anchor. Luke and Katie have been married for 20 years and are raising four kids—Chloe and Chase, 14-year-old twins; Charlie, 8; and Cash, 7. “We’re lucky,” he says. “We spend a lot of time together, and Katie and I are helping them explore their interests, just like we've done for ourselves."

Right now, the family is on a National Park road trip through California, making memories under open skies. "I'm kind of an introvert in an extroverted industry," Luke laughs. "Anything outdoors, away from concrete—that's where I recharge."

Despite his success, Luke keeps a low profile. "I'm not great at self-promotion. I'd rather wear jeans and a sweatshirt than a suit," he says. But ask anyone who knows him—and they'll tell you: he delivers where it counts.

Top Tips

His advice to rising agents? Focus on the long game. "Relationships matter. Don't chase the deal—build trust. The rest will come." For Luke, success isn't about flash or fast wins—it's about consistency, integrity, and showing up for people in meaningful ways. In an industry where transactions come and go, it's the relationships you build that truly stand the test of time. Luke has built a solid career in real estate. Stay tuned for what he accomplishes next!

Blooming through Grief

with some wonderful, wonderful people," she reflects.

She was thriving—professionally and personally. Her oldest son, Luke and his wife, Aly welcomed their daughter, and Mylissa became a proud first-time grandma. But on Valentine's Day 2024, life delivered another devastating blow.

While babysitting her 9-month-old granddaughter Sophia, Mylissa got another knock on the door she never thought she'd endure again. Luke was killed in a head-on collision on his way to work. "It was unimaginable," she says.

Through the anguish, her real estate community became a lifeline. "My Star One family was incredibly supportive," she says. "I received so much support from the people around me." As she and her husband prepared to sell their home and move to Loveland to be closer to her daughter-in-law and Sophia, Mylissa began to see her work in a new light.

"When you go into someone's home, you don't always know what they're going through," she says. "Everyone has a story. Especially in real estate—people are carrying a lot, and it's not always a happy move." She learned to lead with compassion, even while leaning on others. "I had to call on my peers. I had grief brain. I fumbled over my words. I needed help, and people

We grow through what we go through. And in Mylissa Johnson's case, it also made her more compassionate, more connected, and more determined to make a difference.

A real estate professional with eXp Realty in Cincinnati, Mylissa brings more than listings and contracts to the table—she brings life experience, resilience, and a deep understanding that everyone has a story, even if it's one they don't always tell at the open house.

She originally became licensed in 1998 while raising four children under the age of six. "I let my license go at the time," she shares. "I was a stay-at-home mom." She later pivoted into healthcare, working as a surgical assistant at UC Hospital for 16 years. But in September of 2015, Mylissa's life took a heartbreaking turn: her 19-year-old son Nate was killed in a car accident while driving home from a night shift job.

That loss marked her forever.

"I worked a couple more years in surgery but really got burnt out," she says. "I needed a new direction." In 2022, she found it—returning to real estate and getting re-licensed. By then, she had remarried, moved to the west side, and joined Star One Realtors, where she found not just a brokerage, but a family. "I worked like Anne Uchtman, Joel and Sydney Meyer, and Vincent Derisi were there for me.”

And she realized she wasn't alone.

“Within this process, I've connected with a lot of other agents who are bereaved mothers,” she says. “We support each other in this real estate world—especially because it's high pressure. You're expected to show up and be polished even when you're barely functioning.”

Now, Mylissa is creating the support she once needed.

She launched Blooming Through Grief, a growing platform with Instagram, TikTok account, and now a website in the works. “I grieve out loud,” she says. “And that makes a lot of people uncomfortable—but I believe in providing safe spaces to talk about our kids.” She also volunteers at Fernside for Grieving Children as a trained group facilitator. “Our grieving mothers group is trying to meet once a month, except for summer. It's for mothers who have lost a child at any age—from miscarriage to adult loss.”

And her clients? She gives them the same space and sensitivity.

“Owning a home is the American Dream. But selling one? It's not

“My children will always be my children—whether they are here physically or not. I talk to them every day. Just differently now.”

always joyful. I didn't realize how hard it would be to leave the house where we made so many memories,” she admits. “So when I meet someone going through a hard transition, I understand. And depending on their comfort level, I'll share a bit of my story.”

Through her journey, Mylissa has found purpose in her pain—and power in community.

“My children will always be my children—whether they are here physically or not,” she says. “I talk to them every day. Just differently now.”

Mylissa is also mom to Emma (Javier Salas) and is expecting her second grandchild through them, and her youngest son, Seth, who is currently on a search for his first home. Despite what she may be experiencing, she still shows up for life, for herself and for others—proving that sometimes success isn't about the numbers. It's about impact.

“I tell people about my children. It's my favorite thing to do. It gives me purpose.”

Through heartbreak and healing, Mylissa Johnson has found her calling—helping others feel seen, supported, and at home, whether they're buying their first house or navigating unimaginable loss. Her message is clear: you're not alone. Whether you're in need of a trusted real estate guide or simply someone who understands, Mylissa is just a phone call away.

MICHAEL PATTON

of AA Home Inspection

EXPERTISE YOU CAN TRUST

When it comes to inspections, Michael Patton doesn't just walk the walk—he's helped pave the road. As the owner of AA Home Inspection, MVP Inspectors and Inspection Plus Group, Michael is the quiet force behind one of the most respected multi-inspector firms serving Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana. From structural integrity to sewer scopes and radon testing, his companies bring an exceptional level of accuracy to every inspection—and it all started with a leap of faith.

Michael began his professional life in the engineering world, where he worked for nearly 20 years. A friend who knew his skillset encouraged him to explore the field of home inspections. At first, he was skeptical. He had concerns about industry standards and transparency. But he saw an opportunity to raise the bar. "If it's done well," he recalls thinking, "it can be a great service for all involved." That belief became the foundation of everything AA Home Inspection stands for.

In 2002, what started as AA Home Inspection—named for the AA Highway in Alexandria, Kentucky—quickly evolved into a multi-state operation. With the acquisitions of Inspection Plus (Greater Cincinnati-John Cordell), MVP Inspectors (Dayton/Greater Miami Valley-Tom Trotter) and Advanced Radon Testing, the inspection territory and capacity have been greatly increased. Today, his companies inspect everything from small homes to large commercial properties across Cincinnati, Northern Kentucky, Dayton, Southeastern Indiana, and beyond.

With over two decades in the industry, Michael has completed countless inspections and amassed a long list of credentials. He holds home inspection licenses and pest control operator licenses in both Ohio and Kentucky, and a radon mitigation license in Ohio. He's also a CE provider for REALTORS® in Ohio, a CE trainer for inspectors, and one of the few professionals appointed by the Governor of Kentucky to serve on the Kentucky Board of Home Inspectors (KBHI)—receiving the fifth license ever issued in the state. He's also served as President and VP of Education for KREIA (Kentucky Real Estate Inspectors Association).

What drives him? Helping people make smart decisions. "Buying a house is like a first date," he explains. "You're in love with everything you see, but you haven't identified any concerns yet." His job is to dig beneath the surface, uncover the quirks and red flags, and present the facts—plain and simple. "We don't sugarcoat things, but we don't throw stones either. We're neutral and factual. That’s what makes the services valuable.”

AA Home Inspection takes pride in offering everything in-house—including WDI/Termite inspections, radon testing and sewer scopes. “We don’t subcontract anything,” Michael notes. The company has completed over 3,000 sewer scopes alone. With eight licensed inspectors, a seasoned administrative team, and ongoing internal communication among team members, they’re able to problem-solve in real time—delivering answers within minutes. “We continue to work with our team of inspectors to keep them at the top; we have a great group who are fantastic team players!”

Availability is key. Michael knows that top-producing agents work fast, and his team is structured to support that. “We aim to be able to provide services within two days of contacting us, in some instances, same day,” he says. “And if an agent or client needs a weekend or special circumstance inspection? We work to make it happen.”

One of the standout features of the company is its custom-built reporting system, which prioritizes clarity and usability. Michael says, “We keep things straightforward so clients can understand what’s going on with the property.” Their reports are detailed yet easy to understand and include a Create a Request List tool that allows clients and REALTORS® to generate repair requests, add comments, and even insert estimates—all in a clean, shareable PDF. This significantly reduces the agent’s time while clearly articulating the client’s requests.

Whether the commercial inspection (PCA) is in Cleveland, Lexington, or Louisville—or within their regular home inspection service area from Sidney, OH to Williamstown, KY—the company’s focus stays the same: deliver accurate information, clear reporting, and a client-first approach. “We value our relationships with agents, but we work for the buyers—our clients. That distinction is important.”

Why choose AA Home Inspection team? “We always try to exceed expectations,” says Michael. Expect the best. With excellent communication, including calling the client while on the way to the inspection, talking about concerns at the inspection, and following up with them, they are committed to exceeding their clients’ expectations.

Family First

Family is at the heart of everything he does. Michael and his wife, Lori, live in Union, and have been married for 14 years and share a blended family of five children and three grandchildren. When he’s not in crawl spaces or rooftops, Michael enjoys fishing, cooking out, spending time with family, and enjoying the grandbabies. “Lori’s favorite thing in the world is being with the grandbabies,” he says with a smile. After all, they’re only little once. Simply put, it’s all about family to him and Lori.

At the end of the day, AA Home Inspection is about people, not just properties. Whether he’s training inspectors or evaluating the hidden corners of a century-old crawl space, Michael brings unmatched professionalism—and heart—to every square inch.

His commitment to clarity, accuracy, and client-first service defines the company’s mission and sets the standard for every inspector on his team.
