editor's letter

February is often thought of as a quieter month—a pause between the momentum of the new year and the energy of spring. But if there's one thing this issue of Portland Real Producers reminds us, it's that some of the most meaningful work happens in the steady, faithful middle. This month's stories are rooted in purpose, consistency, and showing up fully—both in business and in life.

Our Top Producer, Stephanie Peck, embodies what it means to build a career with intention. From her early days balancing kids and open houses to leading with faith, integrity, and an abundance mindset, Stephanie's story is a powerful reminder that success doesn't have to come at the expense of family, values, or personal growth. She approaches real estate not just as a profession, but as a ministry—one where doing the hard, uncomfortable thing for the good of the client is non-negotiable. Her journey is a testament to what's possible when grit is paired with grace, and when purpose—not pressure—drives the work.

In our Realtor to Watch feature, Ryan Purdy offers a different, but equally compelling perspective. His path to real estate was shaped by global leadership roles, a season of deep purpose during the pandemic, and a desire for more meaningful human connection. Ryan's story resonates with many agents who found their way into real estate later in life—bringing with them hard-earned skills, humility, and a collaborative spirit. His focus on communication, consistency, and long-term relationships is a refreshing reminder that the quiet wins often matter most.

Rounding out this issue is our Partner Spotlight on Landscape East & West—a company that understands the value of reliability, innovation, and community. Steve Stewart's leadership reflects a long-term mindset that so many top producers share: do what you say you're going to do, invest in your people, adapt with intention, and give back whenever possible. Their commitment to quality, sustainability, and follow-through makes them a trusted partner not just in landscaping, but in building stronger communities.

Together, these stories highlight a shared truth: real success in our industry isn't just measured in volume or accolades—it's built through trust, consistency, and purpose over time.

Here's to a new year of raising the bar together—learning from one another, supporting our peers, and leading our market with integrity.

Cheers,

@portlandrealproducers

Congratulations

You've Earned Your Place Among Portland's TOP 500 Agents

Each year, Portland Real Producers has the privilege of recognizing an elite group of real estate professionals whose performance sets them apart. To be named among Portland's Top 500 Agents—based on total sales volume across Clackamas, Multnomah, and Washington counties—is no small achievement. It represents consistency, discipline, client trust, and an unwavering commitment to excellence in an ever-evolving market.

Portland Real Producers is more than a monthly magazine. It is a community-driven platform designed exclusively for top-producing agents, bringing together industry leaders through highly relevant editorial, peer-led events, vetted vendor resources, and opportunities to connect—professionally and personally. We believe that when top agents come together, everyone benefits.

To those receiving our magazine for the first time: congratulations. You've earned your place among the top producers in our region, and we're excited to welcome you into this network of high-performing peers. You'll now receive Portland Real Producers each month, along with invitations to our exclusive events.

To the many agents who have been part of the Portland Real Producers network for years, we extend our sincere appreciation. Your loyalty, engagement, and willingness to share your stories are what make this community special.

As we welcome a new year and a new class of Top 500 Agents, we celebrate not only production, but the people behind it. We look forward to another year of connection, conversation, and continued excellence across Portland's real estate community.

CONGRATULATIONS TO ALL!

Stephanie PECK

MUSCLE, HEART, AND A STEADY HAND ON THE WHEEL

BY KERRY HINRICHS

When Stephanie Peck first dipped her toes into real estate back in 2007, she wasn't chasing commissions or climbing leaderboards. She was in the middle of her first home flip, looking for a career that could evolve with her life. "I realized I could get my real estate license to support our investment search and help others do the same," she recalls. "I wanted a career that would allow me time at home during the day with my babies."

That desire for balance—and a touch of entrepreneurial spark—jumpstarted what would become a deeply fulfilling career. Early on, she began holding open houses for an agent with several new developments, learning the art of conversation and the skill of converting open house leads. That mentor shaped her professional foundation and helped her see real estate as an incredible opportunity.

Before her real estate career took off, she worked in the Building and Planning Department at the City of Gresham, gaining an insider's understanding of the process from the other side of the counter. It's knowledge she still draws on today as she guides clients through their own journeys of home ownership and investment.

But for her, the true reward isn't in the numbers—it's in the ripple effect. "The most rewarding part is knowing that what I do has changed lives," she says. "I'm impacting the clients I serve, the agents I support on my team and within the brokerage, and I've been able to change my family's life, too. My kids often thank me for the work I do because they understand it allows them a lifestyle that wouldn't be possible if it weren't for real estate."

Faith has always been Stephanie's compass. Early in her career, she prayed that God would lead her to the right clients at the right time—a mindset she still carries. "I try to keep an abundance mentality and trust that I'll be positioned to work with the people God wants me to work with when He decides," she shares. "As I've matured personally and professionally, I've learned to let go of what I can't control."

That perspective helps her navigate one of the greatest challenges in real estate—emotional investment. "I'm a problem solver by nature, so I want to fix everyone's problems," she admits. "Sometimes I have to accept that I can't solve everything—or that the solution I can offer isn't what they need most at that moment."

Outside of work, she's every bit as hands-on with her family. Married to her husband, James, for nearly 20 years, she's mom to Logan (15) and Ayla (13). Their family even follows a boy/girl pattern—two kids, two dogs, two cats—all alternating genders, purely by coincidence. "My favorite way to spend my time is supporting my kids in their personal growth and development," she says.

When she's not cheering from the sidelines of a basketball court or a horseback arena, she's likely behind the wheel of her '62 Chevy Nova, cruising to local car shows where she's won a few awards. "My husband and I collect and show classic cars," she says proudly. "We love American muscle." She's also a self-proclaimed wannabe homesteader, tending her garden, crafting homemade goods, and creating handmade products from what she grows.

For her, real estate is a ministry. "As real estate agents, we're given a huge responsibility to act on someone's behalf in one of their biggest life events," she reflects. "It's important to take that seriously. Always act as a professional and a fiduciary. Be willing to do what's hard or uncomfortable if it's what's best for the client."

Her advice for future Top Producers is grounded in that same mix of grit and grace: "You're about to embark on the most challenging and rewarding career. You'll feel every high and low—all within the same day. Use every challenge as a way to learn and each success as a way to multiply it. Stay open to what God has planned for you. He will work it all out for His good."

It's a philosophy that's carried her from her first home flip to a thriving, faith-filled career—and a life built on purpose, passion, and a little bit of horsepower.

Landscape East & West

Outdoor Living Experts

BY KERRY HINRICHS

If you ask Steve Stewart where his passion for landscaping began, he won't point to a classroom or a corporate training. Instead, he'll take you back to the Oregon coast—to Florence, where he grew up on a hobby farm learning the value of hard work, fresh air, and the satisfaction of seeing progress with his own hands. "It was that tie to nature and the earth that ultimately brought me to the landscape industry," he says.

After earning his business degree from the University of Oregon—"GO DUCKS!" he adds—Steve spent many years with International Paper and MicroPower Electronics. Those experiences shaped his leadership approach and business acumen, preparing him for the next chapter with Landscape East & West. Today, he and his wife enjoy life in the Portland metro area as proud parents of three daughters, two sons-in-law, and one granddaughter, who he jokes, "I like best."

Landscape East & West began in 1980 as a small landscape design/build firm serving Portland's east side. As the company expanded into residential maintenance and broadened its service area, its name evolved with it. In 2008, Steve and co-owner Dylan Pollock purchased the business with a clear goal: elevating every aspect of the company through exceptional service, thoughtful innovation, and unwavering quality. Their mission remains the same today—to transform landscaping through inspired creativity, advanced technology, and dependable service.

The company now offers a full range of design/build and weekly maintenance services for residential properties and homeowner associations. Their skilled teams create patios, paths, lawns, retaining walls, fences, decks, covered structures, outdoor kitchens, custom carpentry, and low-voltage lighting—essentially anything that enhances outdoor living. What truly sets them apart, though, is consistency. "This shouldn't be unique," Steve notes, "but we give clients a timeline for when their project will start and finish—and we deliver on that promise." Maintenance clients know exactly which day their crew will arrive, a level of reliability that stands out in an industry where schedules often shift. Landscape East & West is also one of the few landscape contractors with dedicated carpentry crews, allowing homeowners to create cohesive, fully integrated outdoor spaces without juggling multiple contractors.

Beyond their client work, the company is active throughout the Portland metro community, contributing time and services to organizations such as the Sunshine Division, Refit, the HBA Foundation, Ronald McDonald House, and various charity auctions. "We're always willing to help worthy causes," Steve says, reflecting the company's belief that strong communities are built by businesses that show up.

Like many industries, the landscaping world has faced challenges in 2025, from tightening budgets to rising costs. Steve views these not as setbacks but as opportunities to adapt and improve. The company has invested in new business software to route crews more efficiently, refined its design approach to help homeowners stay within budget, and embraced the next wave of landscaping technology. Robotic mowers and battery-powered blowers are already part of their operations, and Steve anticipates a full transition to battery equipment within the next five years. These innovations reduce noise, emissions, fuel use, and labor strain—benefiting both clients and staff while preparing the business for a more sustainable future.

Landscape East & West is ready for it. Rooted in Oregon soil and driven by a commitment to doing things the right way, the company continues to grow by holding fast to the values Steve learned long ago: work hard, follow through, and let the results speak for themselves.

RYAN PURDY

THE HOUSE THAT HEART BUILT

BY KERRY HINRICHS

When the pandemic hit in 2020, most of us were just trying to stay upright. For Ryan Purdy, that year marked both an unexpected pause and serendipitous purpose. At the time, he was working as an executive at Amazon. His work shifted dramatically, and he was tapped to help lead a small team responsible for delivering personal protective equipment (PPE) across the country.

"We were on weekly calls with the White House," he recalls. "Hospitals, clinics, first responders—everybody needed help. It was one of the most rewarding times of my life. I finally felt like I was doing something that really mattered."

When Ryan returned to his regular role managing the beauty supply chain, that deep sense of purpose left a void, and he realized he longed for deeper human connection. Around that same time, he was looking for a home in Seattle and found himself unexpectedly fascinated by the process.

"I thought, maybe this is where I could bring together what I've learned in the corporate world—strategy, communication, leadership—but use it to help people in a more personal way."

Ryan officially stepped into real estate—and, like so many who find the right fit after years in another field, he never looked back.

Building a New Kind of Career

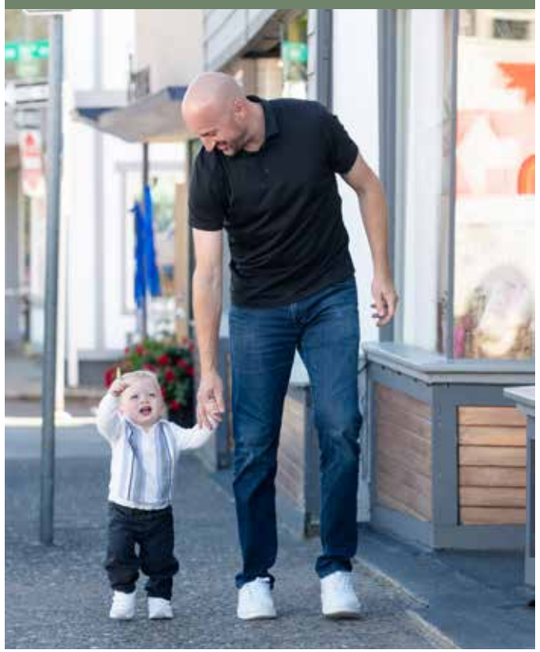

Before becoming a Realtor®, Ryan worked across many industries and continents, including eight years at Nike in supply chain, sales, and strategic planning; time at Amazon; a stint as COO of a bottled water manufacturer in Trinidad and Tobago; and head of a manufacturing company here in Oregon. He also earned his MBA from Portland State University—a nod to his love of learning and problem-solving.

That varied path now feels like the perfect prelude to real estate, where every transaction requires equal parts business acumen and emotional intelligence. "I've had great mentors at every stage," he says. "Real estate can look competitive from the outside, but inside, it's incredibly collaborative."

It's that blend of humility and drive that seems to define Ryan. He doesn't sugarcoat the challenges of the business. "Real estate can be a slog," he admits with a laugh. "We tend to focus on the wins, but there are plenty of tough days too—financial risk, slow listings, tricky transactions. The key for me has been surrounding myself with proactive, forward-thinking people. It keeps me grounded and motivated."

"We tend to focus on the wins, but there are plenty of tough days too—financial risk, slow listings, tricky transactions. The key for me has been surrounding myself with proactive, forward-thinking people. It keeps me grounded and motivated."

Reward Beyond the Sale

Ask Ryan what keeps him motivated, and he doesn't hesitate. "It's the text messages you get a year later," he says, smiling. "When someone writes to say, 'We still love our home. It was the right choice for our family.' That's what it's all about."

For Ryan, success in real estate has less to do with numbers and more to do with people. With trust. With the quiet satisfaction of knowing he's helped someone plant both physical and emotional roots.

Family, Adventure, and a Life Well-Lived

At home, life is full in the best way. Ryan and his wife, Caitlin, met years ago on a scuba diving trip designed for people with disabilities—an experience that continues to shape their family's outlook today. "We were taking people scuba diving who had every kind of disability imaginable," he says. "The organization we work with—S.A.F.E. Scuba—finds a way to make it possible for anyone to dive. I'm one of the dive buddies who helps make that happen. It's humbling and inspiring every single time."

Now back in Portland, the couple has a 16-month-old son, Calvin, and another baby boy on the way in March. Their days are busy, joyful, and often a little chaotic—especially with a pack of cousins all under the age of three. "We're an adventurous bunch," Ryan laughs. "We love to travel. Calvin's already been on more than 15 flights."

When he's not working or chasing a toddler, Ryan can usually be found watching Liverpool soccer, tackling home renovations ("I've made every mistake you can make," he admits), or planning the next family trip.

Perspective and Purpose

If you ask Ryan what advice he'd give to aspiring top producers, he'll tell you it comes down to two things: consistency and communication. "If you're consistently working to improve your business, the results will follow," he says. "And communication—being proactive with everyone involved can make all the difference."

To his 18-year-old self, his message is gentler: "Don't take life too seriously. You'll always find your path if you just believe in yourself to find it."

Today, Ryan's path feels solidly his own—a career built on relationships, growth, and gratitude. In many ways, Ryan Purdy's story is about rediscovering purpose, and using every skill and experience from the past to build something truly meaningful for the future.

REAL Testimonies from Real Producers Who Rely on Lawyers Title®

When excellence is non-negotiable...

My Lawyers Title team is truly exceptional. They go far beyond expectations–investing in my business, my growth, and my success with authenticity and care that is rare in our industry.

Tessa Gold
Owner, Principal Broker | Gold Properties

Lawyers Title goes far beyond providing a service–they deeply understands our team and often brings solutions before we even realize we need them.

Craig Reger
Founder | The Reger Group

For over a decade, Lawyers Title has truly been an extension of my business. Their unmatched service, genuine investment in our growth, and willingness to show up as real partners, not just vendors, have shaped so much of what we've built.

Brittany Gibbs
Owner, Founder | Move Real Estate

Two decades and thousands of families serviced together have convinced me of a few things: Lawyers Title views me as their partner, shows up with a level of service that always outperforms expectations, and cares as much about my clients as I do.

Chris Suarez
CEO | Xperience Real Estate

Lawyers Title is an absolute force in this business! Their knowledge, influence, contacts, experience, and encouragement are invaluable to my operation.

Steve Nassar
Partner | Premiere Property Group

For two decades, Lawyers Title has been the most trusted and instrumental business partner I could have asked for. They helped us build the Fox Real Estate Group brand into what it is today.

Marc Fox
CEO, Fox Real Estate Groups

Working with Lawyers Title has been a game-changer. They show up with high energy, genuine support, and an unwavering commitment to helping their partners succeed.

Matt Soukup
Director of Sales | Fox Real Estate Groups

Lawyers Title is definitely the very best in the business. We are so lucky to have them.

Randy Sebastian
Founder and President Renaissance Homes
