editor's letter

There's a moment in every career where the focus shifts from simply doing the work to understanding the impact of the work.

This month's cover feature, Peter Cutile, clearly reflects that shift. His transition from banking into real estate wasn't about chasing a new opportunity—it was about stepping into a more meaningful role in the lives of his clients. Nearly 600 families later, his approach remains grounded in clarity, guidance, and helping people move forward with confidence. It's a reminder that at this level, success is not just about transactions—it's about reducing uncertainty and creating trust in moments that matter.

In this issue, you'll also meet Kelly Calabria, whose career has been built on a different—but equally intentional—foundation. From her early days in Lake Oswego to nearly two decades in the business, Kelly has consistently chosen preparation over pressure and collaboration over ego. Her steady, thoughtful approach reflects a deep understanding of what clients actually need: someone who can anticipate what's coming next and guide them through it with calm and clarity.

What connects both of these stories is not production, it's perspective.

At this stage of the business, the differentiator is rarely effort alone. It's how you think, how you prepare, and how you show up over time. It's the ability to stay steady when things get complex, to continue learning, and to keep people at the center of the work.

As you move through this issue, I hope these stories serve as a reminder of what builds a lasting business—and a meaningful one.

Here's to continuing to grow, refine, and lead at a higher level.

Cheers, Tiffany

FINDING HIS PLACE

BY KERRY HINRICHS
PHOTOGRAPHY BY MICHELLE STEVENS, ARTISTIQUE

Some careers evolve gradually. Others shift when someone realizes they're capable of something more.

For Peter, the move into real estate came from exactly that kind of realization.

He began his career in banking, working first as a personal banker and then as a lender at U.S. Bank. It was steady, structured work—and it gave him a front-row seat to one of the most important financial decisions people make. But over time, something began to stand out.

"I felt like lending was just one part of the bigger picture," he says. "I wanted to have more impact."

That perspective led him to begin the licensing process in 2015. By 2016, he was fully licensed and stepping into a new role—one that allowed him to guide clients through the entire experience, not just a single piece of it.

From the beginning, he didn't try to figure it out on his own.

He found a mentor who helped him learn the business from the ground up—someone who offered both direction and perspective during those early years. That relationship shaped how he approaches his work today—not just in the process itself, but in how he shows up for clients and others in the industry.

“The most rewarding part is the impact. Being able to take something that can feel overwhelming and help people move through it with clarity and confidence—that matters.”

Over the past decade, that foundation has translated into meaningful results. He’s helped nearly 600 families buy or sell homes—a number that reflects far more than volume.

“The most rewarding part is the impact,” he says. “Being able to take something that can feel overwhelming and help people move through it with clarity and confidence—that matters.”

Many of the clients he works with come in unsure of what’s possible. Some are hopeful but hesitant. Others aren’t convinced homeownership is within reach. Walking with people through that process—helping them understand their options, make informed decisions, and ultimately reach goals they weren’t sure were possible—is what makes the work meaningful.

“There have been so many times where someone starts out with doubt,” he says, “and we’re able to show them a path forward.”

Building a career at that level comes with its challenges—balance being one of the biggest.

Real estate is demanding by nature, and over time, the roles expand—agent, mentor, business owner, friend, husband, father. Holding all of that takes intention, and he’s quick to point out that he doesn’t do it alone.

“My wife is a huge part of that,” he says. “I couldn’t do any of this without her.”

The two have been married for nearly 12 years and are raising three kids together.

Family is a central part of his life, and it’s also what keeps everything else in perspective.

Outside of work, he gravitates toward experiences that push him physically and mentally. Backpacking has become a consistent outlet—one that’s taken him from the Grand Canyon to Zion National Park, and most recently, around Mont Blanc.

Those trips offer something different from the pace of day-to-day work. Fewer distractions. More clarity. A chance to reset before stepping back into a full schedule.

That mindset carries into how he approaches growth.

When asked what advice he’d give someone hoping to build a strong career in real estate, his answer is straightforward: “Start early, stay humble, and always be willing to learn.”

It’s a philosophy that’s guided him from the beginning—and one that continues to shape how he works today. Because even after nearly a decade in the business, he sees the work the same way he did at the start:

There’s always more to learn. There’s always a way to grow. And there’s always another opportunity to help someone move forward.

A Record 5,000—and Counting

In a business where most careers are measured in seasons, Darryl Bodle has built his over decades—one relationship, one transaction, and one reputation at a time. That long view has now culminated in a milestone that stands apart: more than 5,000 career closed sales, the highest recorded total by a broker in Oregon history.

What distinguishes this milestone is how it was achieved. Bodle built his business from the ground up, rooted in relationships and a commitment to doing things the right way. Even as his company has grown into a top-performing real estate group, he remains directly involved with clients—maintaining a level of accessibility and hands-on service that is increasingly rare at this level.

"At its core, this milestone is about people," said Bodle. "Every transaction represents a relationship, a moment in someone's life, and a level of trust we never take for granted."

Today, his business is 96% referral-based—a testament to repeat clients, strong relationships, and consistent results. He has also earned national recognition, ranking among the top 1.5% of more than 1.4 million agents nationwide.

Through Darryl Bodle Real Estate, his family-owned company, Bodle has expanded across residential, luxury, development, multifamily, and commercial sectors, advising clients at every level while staying ahead of evolving market dynamics. His involvement in the Street of Dreams further reflects his commitment to elevating standards across all price points.

With more than $2 billion in career volume and features in outlets including Forbes, The Wall Street Journal, and Fortune, Bodle's impact is both measurable and enduring.

"As we've grown, one thing has never changed," he said. "We stay close to our clients, stay involved, and treat every transaction like it matters—because it does."

Surpassing 5,000 transactions is not simply a milestone—it's a reflection of a career built on trust, discipline, and long-term vision, with continued momentum ahead.

Kelly Calabria

BY KERRY HINRICHS
PHOTOGRAPHY BY MICHELLE STEVENS, ARTISTIQUE

Kelly began her real estate career in 2006 at John L. Scott in Lake Oswego. What drew her in wasn't the spotlight of sales, but the thinking behind it—the strategy, the negotiation, and the understanding that the right decision at the right time can positively shape a family's future for years to come.

Helping people navigate something that carries both financial weight and emotional complexity still feels meaningful. Buying or selling a home isn't just paperwork. It's timing. It's pressure. It's hope. Kelly's natural optimism and warm, approachable style help bring a sense of calm to what can otherwise feel overwhelming. Her positive outlook, steady perspective, and genuine smile remind clients that even the most complex moments can be navigated thoughtfully and successfully.

Early in her career, Kelly also recognized the value of collaboration in an industry where many agents work independently. She believed clients would be better served by a more connected, thoughtful approach—one where preparation, communication, and shared insight help create a stronger experience from start to finish.

In 2008, she partnered with Cynthia Gerwe—not to scale quickly, but to build something dependable and client-focused. Their approach was rooted in preparation, honesty, and teamwork—ensuring there were always two people thinking ahead on behalf of those they served.

In 2010, they joined Soldera Properties for its boutique, relationship-centered model. In 2017, they transitioned to the Hasson Company. And in 2023, when ELEETE Real Estate opened its Lake Oswego office, the local ownership and collaborative culture felt aligned with how they already worked.

When Cynthia retired in 2024 and relocated to Kansas City, it marked the end of a 16-year partnership. But the systems, discipline, and trusted relationships they cultivated remain foundational. The consistency didn't disappear—it became instinct.

Rather than retreat into complete independence, Kelly chose to stay collaborative. She brings other agents in when it makes sense—especially if another set of eyes or a different strength will serve her clients better.

Kelly's path here wasn't linear. Property management taught her the mechanics—contracts, timelines, managing expectations when they stretch thin. Event coordination sharpened her instinct for anticipating what might go sideways before it does.

In 2010, she co-founded Kelly's Jelly, a specialty food company that grew into a nationally recognized brand over 15 years. Building it required patience and a tolerance for slow growth—lessons that carried back into her real estate work.

Ask her what she values most, though, and she'll immediately mention connection.

A lifelong Lake Oswego resident, Kelly has spent nearly two decades in real estate becoming the person clients call before they even know what they need—a recommendation, a second opinion, a gut check. Months later, she's still the one they text first.

Much of her work lies in anticipating the next steps, often before others even realize they're needed. Real estate carries variables—inspection surprises, financing shifts, timing changes that can unsettle even seasoned buyers and sellers. She tries to spot the pressure point before her clients feel it.

Outside of business, family is the center of her world. She and her husband, Adam, have been married 23 years. Their daughter, Maria, is 19 and attending the University of Oregon, and Penny, 17, is a junior at Lake Oswego High School. Both sets of parents, along with siblings, nieces, and nephews, live nearby—something she doesn't take for granted. Twyla, their six-year-old beagle, keeps everyone properly supervised.

BUYING OR SELLING A HOME ISN'T JUST PAPERWORK. IT'S TIMING. IT'S PRESSURE. IT'S HOPE. KELLY'S NATURAL OPTIMISM AND WARM, APPROACHABLE STYLE HELP BRING A SENSE OF CALM TO WHAT CAN OTHERWISE FEEL OVERWHELMING.

Kelly fills her time the way many Oregonians do—travel with friends and family, supporting local businesses, pickleball matches that run longer than expected, yoga classes, and time outdoors. At 40, she earned her black belt in Taekwondo—not for recognition, but for the discipline.

If she offers advice to future Top Producers, it's practical and unglamorous—treat it like a business from the beginning. Develop resilience early. Don't confuse feedback with identity. Prepare more than feels necessary. Trust builds slowly, and it builds because you show up consistently.

After selling Kelly's Jelly and stepping fully into this chapter, Kelly isn't reinventing herself.

She's narrowing her focus and choosing depth over noise. Kelly is still doing the work—just clearer now about where her energy belongs.

LENDING, Without the Guesswork

BY KERRY HINRICHS

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MICHELLE STEVENS, ARTISTIQUE

Tammy Wittren has been in real estate and lending long enough to know what matters—and what doesn't.

After graduating college in 1988, she started out in real estate, working alongside one of the top agents in the country. It gave her early exposure to the pace of the business and, more importantly, to the client experience—what people need, what they worry about, and how much it matters to have someone trustworthy guiding the process.

When she later moved to Oregon, her path shifted. During her own home loan process, the lender she was working with saw her background and encouraged her to consider lending. She joined his team as an assistant and moved into originating loans within a year.

Today, Tammy leads The Wittren Team with Rate, serving clients across Portland and the surrounding areas. The team offers a full range of loan options, including conventional, FHA and VA, jumbo, non-QM, renovation, and reverse mortgages, along with financing for primary homes, second homes, and investment properties.

But the work itself is pretty straightforward in her mind.

"We start by understanding what's actually going on," Tammy says. "Then we figure out the best way to move forward."

That approach carries through in how she works with both clients and agents. For clients, it means clear explanations and a plan that makes sense—not just for today, but for where they're headed. For agents, it means consistent communication, early problem-solving, and follow-through.

Nothing complicated or flashy. Just doing the job well, and with integrity.

That consistency is backed by a team that knows their roles and works closely together. Tammy partners with Caryn Barney, a licensed originator who has been with her for nine years and brings more than 20 years of experience. Together, they handle the front end—early conversations, structuring, and getting everything in place.

From there, Production Manager Bonnie Adams takes over. She's been with the team for more than a decade and has over 25 years in the industry, keeping everything moving efficiently through closing.

It's a setup that allows the team to stay hands-on where it matters while making sure nothing slips behind the scenes.

After all these years, Tammy hasn't tried to overcomplicate what works.

"People just want to know they're in good hands," she says. "If you show up, communicate, and do what you say you're going to do, that goes a long way."

And in a business where trust is everything, that's exactly what she's built.

EVENT RECAP

RP Interactive Power Panel

We had a fantastic morning together at our recent panel event! An interactive discussion inside the beautiful new Renaissance home on Country Commons Rd was led by Marc Fox, Dirk Hmura, Erin Rothrock, Kevin May, and Darcie VanderZanden.

A special thank you to our wonderful Presenting Sponsor, Dawn Carter of RATE Mortgage. Dawn collaborated with MiaDonna to give away a fabulous pair of 1ctw diamond earrings to our lucky winner Donna Baten. Our friends at Jaguar Land Rover had two gorgeous vehicles on display, and the great folks at Details Home Inspections shared their photo booth to capture all the fun! Bread 'n Board supplied the delicious charcuterie cups.

Our Real Producers events offer an opportunity to connect and collaborate with fellow top professionals in our industry. Our next event is Tuesday, July 14th, from 11am to 1pm. For all the details and to RSVP, email us at portlandrealproducers@gmail.com.
