WELCOME CLASS OF 2026!

As I write this, 2.5 years ago on July 25th 2023, we submitted our very first deadline for Coastal Real Producers. And in the six months prior, Colleen had pitched and sold the vision to individuals and businesses. These first Preferred Partners believed that building a community of the best in Coastal real estate was a cause worth investing in.

We hosted our launch party in November of 2023 and the nerves we felt were next level. Every other day, we were talking each other off the ledge. Would anyone come? Could we create an environment that agents across brokerages and businesses would come together in the spirit of collaboration over competition?

Our loan programs include:

- FHA
- JUMBO
- VA
- Conventional
- USDA
- and more financing options!

Over the last 2.5 years, we have published almost 100 of your stories and countless articles that you have submitted, sharing your wealth of knowledge and expertise. It takes courage to be vulnerable and share your life with people you know, but to share openly about your challenges, wins, losses, adventures, and other moments in your life with your industry peers, that is next level.

When asked what is my favorite part, it is your stories. I have laughed, cried, and cheered as I have read each one. I look forward to the next 100 and then the next, and next, and next...you get it.

In addition to recognizing our Top 300, this year, we're proud to also acknowledge agents ranked #301-600 based on 2025 production. These agents will receive a digital edition of the magazine, access to our Preferred Partners, and may be invited to select events where capacity allows as we continue to expand and celebrate excellence across our Coastal community.

Here we are for the 3rd time announcing the Top 300 agents. The nerves and excitement of this announcement only grow each year. We are just as excited as you are when you make it, and our hearts are heavy when you come up a little short to make this list. However, once you are here, you are always a part of the family!

Welcome, class of 2026! We are happy you are here.

The website provides valuable resources to help members make the most of this community. You can visit CoastalRealProducers.com/agents to find the following...

Speaking of Preferred Partners...this magazine and platform is FREE for the top 300 agents only because of them. We have been a special witness to how much these businesses believe in YOU and the COMMUNITY. Go ahead and check out our Preferred Partner index in this edition, on the website, and pinned to the top of our Facebook group to familiarize yourself with the businesses. Each of them has been heavily recommended to me by YOU, the top agents in the community. They are the best of the best, and we look forward to our top agents and partners continuing to build strong relationships over the years to come!

Congratulations and welcome!

Cheers,

WORDS of WISDOM

To celebrate our 2026 Top 300 class, we asked our Coastal Real Producers community to share some words of wisdom and encouragement.

1. Looking back, what lesson did experience teach you that no award, ranking, or production number ever could?

Nicole Callender, Keller Williams Realty: That trust compounds. Relationships, integrity, and consistency outlast any spike in numbers and most importantly, they're what sustain you when seasons change.

Liz Kapp, Long & Foster Real Estate: Experience matters and can be the number one factor when someone is choosing an agent. If you are just starting out, it might be wise to either apprentice under a more experienced agent or join a team. What you can learn from their experiences is invaluable!

Chris Mancini, Esq., Ridgway Law Group: There is no substitute for "been there, done that", but the rewarding part is that experience typically results in problem solving for clients, which is what we always strive to do.

Dustin Parker, The Parker Group:

The numbers never made me better at anything. The failures, the hard conversations, and the people who stuck around did.

Cindy Poremski, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices:

Experience has taught me that relationships are the most important thing. The trust clients place in me, the referrals that come years later, and the long-term relationships I build are what truly define success.

Showing up consistently, doing the right thing, and genuinely caring for people is what sustains a successful career in real estate.

Terry "Mr March" Riley, RE/MAX: As most who know me know, I live my life with set goals. One of my favorite sayings is "a goal without a plan is just a wish." To this end, I set goals and document results, however this year I realized I have overlooked the C-word. Yes, I am consistent. But I realized not everyone else is. So now I suggest to my young friends: be consistent.

Amanda Ryan, Jack Lingo REALTOR®: While real estate is a business and we work with numbers every day, it is important to remember that we are ultimately selling more than homes—we are helping clients invest in a lifestyle and a place where memories will be made. For some, it may be a first home; for others, it may be the final home they ever purchase. Never lose sight of the fact that the relationships you build are the most important part of any transaction. Listening carefully and connecting with clients on a personal level is truly invaluable.

Kari Story, SWBC Mortgage Corporation: Kindness and understanding will get you everywhere. If you take time with your clients, show genuine interest in them and put their needs first, your awards and ranking and production will follow.

Danny Tags Taglienti, Keller Williams Realty: Make sure you have all your ducks in a row to be a go-to agent. Lenders, contractors, home inspectors, title companies - build a rapport. They are not just contacts, they are your keys to success.

Veronica Townsend, Weidman & Townsend, P.A.: As a perfectionist, I have always struggled with even the idea of a failure or mistake, but that is where learning and growing happens most.

2. What advice would you offer new Top 300 members for fully engaging with the community, building connections, and maximizing its value?

Nicole Callender, Keller Williams Realty: Show up curious, not competitive. Give generously, ask better questions, follow through, and treat every connection as a long-term relationship, not a transaction.

Liz Kapp, Long & Foster Real Estate: Building a business in real estate is all about relationships and helping your clients to achieve their goals. Continuing to nurture those relationships over time will only continue to help grow your sphere. Be active in your community, whether it be through volunteering, supporting community events or becoming an advocate for community and government affairs. When you love and support your community..it is easy to sell it too.

Chris Mancini, Esq., Ridgway Law Group: Be bold; everyone is in the same boat and looking to just connect and help each other.

Dustin Parker, The Parker Group: Ask people about their worst year, not their best. That's where the real lessons live, and real connection starts.

Cindy Poremski, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices:

Focus on developing relationships with others in the business. Coastal Real Producers is an incredible organization that offers so many opportunities to connect through networking events. I encourage new members to take advantage of these gatherings (we are lucky to have CRP here at the beach!).

Terry "Mr March" Riley, RE/MAX: Charities matter. And you can give time, money, energy, and prayer. Love this town for keeping the local vibe so charitable.

Amanda Ryan, Jack Lingo REALTOR®: Always avoid burning bridges and treat all parties with the utmost respect. Real estate transactions are often complex, and as agents we rely on the expertise and cooperation of many professionals to successfully bring a deal to closing. It truly takes a village, and in a small town those resources can become stretched.

Professionalism and kindness go a long way—no matter how successful you may be.

Leslie Smith, Sheppard Realty Inc.: Go into it with the mindset of building real relationships, not just collecting information.

Be present. Be helpful. Be consistent. I've been fortunate to learn from some of the best in this business, and I didn't just collect their advice, I applied it. I used it to become the kind of Realtor I would want representing me or my family. The real value of a community like this isn't what you take from it, it's what you build from it, what you give back, and how you choose to show up every day.

Kari Story, SWBC Mortgage Corporation:

Be present. Attend what you can. Get to know not just the professions, but get to know the person first and foremost.

Danny Tags Taglienti, Keller Williams Realty:

Communicating with your fellow agents is the key to success. Deals are smoother when agents trust you to do the right thing, work with them, they are not the adversary.

Veronica Townsend, Weidman & Townsend, P.A.:

Always avoid burning bridges and treat all parties with the utmost respect. Real estate transactions are often complex, and as agents we rely on the expertise and cooperation of many professionals to successfully bring a deal to closing. It truly takes a village, and in a small town those resources can become stretched.

3. What are you most excited about as you look ahead to 2026?

Nicole Callender, Keller Williams Realty: Expanding my impact while simplifying operations...doing fewer things better, with deeper focus on leadership, legacy, and client experience.

Liz Kapp, Long & Foster Real Estate: I am looking forward to helping more clients move into their next chapter in life, whether it is buying or selling here at the beach!

Chris Mancini, Esq., Ridgway Law Group:

Positivity; The market is always challenging one way or another- positivity and excitement are what makes it fun and rewarding.

and refine both personally and professionally. The market is shifting, and with that comes an incredible opportunity to serve clients at a higher level, with more clarity, strategy, and intention. I'm excited about refining how I do business, deepening relationships, and helping more people make smart, confident decisions in a changing market. And honestly, I'm excited about doing it all with more purpose, more balance, and even more gratitude than ever before. Real estate is my passion, but I'm equally passionate about making a positive difference in the town of Ocean City and the community I call home.

Kari Story, SWBC Mortgage Corporation:

I'm surrounded by great people... my work family, my blood family and my friends who are also family. When you head into a new year feeling grateful and blessed to have that kind of support (and rates are coming down some)...it's bound to be a good year!

Dustin Parker, The Parker Group:

Exploring new creative projects and being present for a season of change in this industry. Feels like anything's possible.

Cindy Poremski, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices:

I'm excited to keep doing what I love, in a way that aligns with both my professional goals and my personal life.

Veronica Townsend, Weidman & Townsend, P.A.:

Big exciting change to my business for it to truly reflect me as a person and professional, while better serving my community and my clients.

JOHN MULLINS

OF HEADWATERS CONSTRUCTION

Home is Where the Trust Is

BY JOSEPH COTTLE
ATLANTIC EXPOSURE

For John Mullins, construction has never been just about buildings. It has always been about people.

"One thing I like people to understand is that I do this for the relationships, not for the money," John says. That mindset shapes everything he does at Headwaters Construction, from how projects are designed to how he interacts with clients. It is why his business card does not say "owner" or "sales." It says "customer advocate."

Headwaters Construction has existed in one form or another for nearly 27 years, but the business John runs today is the product of decades spent learning the trades from the inside out. After high school, he traveled up and down the East Coast doing high-rise construction work and running cranes. Eventually, the constant travel wore on him, and he decided to stay closer to home. He entered the electrical trade, steadily working his way toward his electrical license. From there, his curiosity took over.

"Once I got that license, of course, I was on jobs with plumbers and HVAC guys and carpenters," he says. "So I kind of picked up all those things, and then over time, I just started to obtain the knowledge of overall construction." Over the years, he added more certifications and licenses, building a foundation broad enough to support the type of company he wanted to create.

That vision came from watching property owners struggle. As an electrical subcontractor, John saw how frustrating it was for clients to coordinate multiple trades, but he also knew that hiring a traditional general contractor often drove costs far beyond what people expected. "No homeowner, no property manager, no property owner wanted to deal with each individual subcontractor," he says. "But then to hire a GC, you're exploding your budget." Headwaters emerged as his solution: a single point of contact who stays deeply involved, without losing the personal, trade-by-trade attention.

John does not describe himself as a typical general contractor. "I'm a personal contractor," he says. While he no longer carries tools onto job sites, he is immersed in every detail. "My tool now is a pencil," he says. "I'm hands-on from start to finish. I actually get involved in the minutia of everything." He oversees how things are built, how they meet code, and how they fit a client's long-term needs.

That approach is rooted in how seriously he takes trust. "I treat people's homes like I treat mine," John says. "The trust is more important than the actual bottom line. I'd much rather get Christmas cards than I would complaints." He answers his phone at dinner. He stays involved when projects are finished. He wants clients to feel safe, comfortable, and confident in the spaces he helps create.

John grew up in Denton, Maryland, and though he lived in other parts of the state, he eventually returned. Home, to him, "means a place where you feel safe and comfortable," and that definition carries into his work. Headwaters today handles everything from light commercial projects to residential builds and remodels, operating across Maryland and Delaware. John recently began expanding into specialized divisions like roofing, but his goal remains the same. "I want to get bigger, but I don't want to lose the personal feel," he says.

Outside of work, John enjoys traveling, fishing, and spending time with his family. He has three children and three grandkids, and he appreciates anything that clears his head, whether that is being out on the water or exploring a new place.

Still, his business reflects who he is. "You can buy roofing shingles, you can buy windows, you can buy a kitchen countertop from a lot of people," he says. "The only difference is you're buying me."

LINDA BOVA

ROOTED in RELATIONSHIPS

For nearly three decades, Linda Bova has built her real estate career the same way she's built her life: by putting down roots, showing up for people, and trusting that relationships matter more than transactions.

Linda's professional life started in a very different world, working in the restaurant business, then insurance for 13 years, and then finally bartending while earning her real estate license. All of that hands-on customer-facing experience taught her how to read people, how to listen, and how to make someone feel comfortable the moment they met her. And her time behind the bar gave her more than a paycheck; it gave her a headstart on her real estate career, although she didn't realize it at the time.

"I talked to everybody," Linda says. "You learn how to connect, how to listen, and how to make people feel at ease. That's still what I do every day."

In 1998, there were no online courses for real estate, so Linda left her career in insurance management and enrolled in the full schedule of day courses at DelTech Community College. She went back to bartending in the evenings as she had done in the late 1970s when attending Salisbury University after high school.

"I was bartending and started real estate at the same time," Linda says. "I kind of leveraged both." Bartending ended up being a database goldmine for the leads that would earn her the rookie of the year award in 1998.

Linda stepped into an industry that would soon test her resilience, creativity, and commitment. What started as a side step quickly became a calling. Linda realized she had found work that fit both her personality and her values.

Almost immediately, her background began to pay off.

The relationships she had built over years in restaurants didn't disappear when she changed careers. They followed her. People she already knew and trusted started reaching out. Word spread. One conversation led to another.

"It took a few years," she says. "But eventually, people started calling me instead of me calling them."

From the beginning, Linda gravitated toward a niche many agents overlook: manufactured and modular homes. Where others saw limitations, she saw opportunity. She learned the details, the regulations, the financing challenges, and the misconceptions. She became an advocate for a segment of buyers who often needed someone willing to truly understand their options.

"I never really fit into a box," Linda says. "So I didn't build a business that fit into one, either."

That independent streak eventually led her to open her own brokerage, The SEA BOVA Associates, in 2003. It was a bold move, especially for someone still early in her real estate career. Of course, just a few years after launching her brokerage, the housing market collapsed. Linda's first five years in business as a broker-owner landed directly in the teeth of the Great Recession.

"That was a heck of a time," she says. "You either figured it out, or you didn't survive."

Linda figured it out. She stayed close to her clients and her community. Instead of retreating, she leaned in. Those years reshaped how she worked and deepened why she worked.

I NEVER REALLY FIT INTO A BOX.

So I didn't build a business that fit into one, either."

"You learn really quickly that you're not just selling houses," she says. "You're helping people through real life."

That perspective still drives her today. After nearly 28 years in real estate, what keeps Linda motivated isn't volume, awards, or market share. It's people. It's the moment when stress turns into relief. It's the call after closing. It's the long relationships that stretch across decades.

"I love seeing people get to the next chapter," she says. "Whether it's their first home, their last home, or something in between, I get to be part of that."

Linda's love for real estate is inseparable from her love for where she lives. Based along the Delaware coast, she's deeply rooted in the area she serves. She lives in Lewes, working out of Rehoboth Beach, and the rhythm of coastal life suits her.

"There's just something about being near the water," she says. "It resets you."

That sense of reset matters to Linda, because her days can be demanding. When she's not working, she's intentional about doing things that recharge her. She loves dancing. She loves massages and taking care of her health. She plays pool in a shed she built five years ago. She gardens, growing tomatoes, herbs, and flowers, tending to both beauty and function.

"I definitely have a green thumb," she says, describing her favorite flowers, her healthy tomato plants, and the fruit from the citrus trees she's tended in her yard.

She also loves the quiet rituals of home life: watching birds, spotting owls near her house, caring for plants through the winter, and creating spaces that feel lived in. These details aren't separate from her professional life. They inform it. They remind her what home is supposed to feel like.

That authenticity is why Linda still loves what she does after nearly three decades. It's why clients come back. It's why their kids call her. It's why she continues to evolve instead of burn out.

"This business has given me a life," Linda says. "And I'm grateful for it."

For Linda Bova, real estate has never just been a career. It's been a vehicle for connection, a front-row seat to people's stories, and a way to stay woven into the community she calls home.

"Whether it's their first home, their last home, or something in between,

I GET TO BE PART

OF THAT.
