Real Voices. One Room.

This time of year always feels like a transition.

The market has gained momentum. Days are lengthening. Energy is returning. Along with it is a renewed focus on what truly matters in your business.

In a market like the North Shore, focus is crucial. There's no shortage of competition, noise, or opinions on how to succeed. But when the right people gather, the conversation shifts. It becomes less about theory and more about what actually works at the highest level. That is precisely what we have aimed to create at the 2026 spring event.

That is precisely what we have aimed to create at the 2026 spring event.

For the first time, we are bringing together a POWERHOUSE panel of industry leaders from across Chicagoland. These individuals are not only performing at a high level, but are also actively influencing the direction of real estate. Different perspectives. Different business models. One shared standard of excellence.

RP panel events have always been a fantastic experience for the community. What better time than 2026 to bring voices from all three Chicagoland Real Producers together under one roof? A special thanks to Studio41 for hosting this year's spring panel on May 21st. Scan the code to see our panelists and make sure to register early to secure your spot.

Christos Prappas

Showing Up

BY CHRIS MENEZES

Christos Prappas believes in the power of opportunity, and he's living proof that it can pay off. For him, success comes down to one simple thing: showing up.

"Eighty percent of everything you want to accomplish comes from showing up. Eighty percent of success is showing up," he says.

It's a philosophy he learned and embraced well before he entered real estate. Born and raised in Greece, Christos's work ethic and outlook were first inspired by his parents, who moved to Melbourne, Australia for a better life. Through buying and selling properties they created stability and opportunity for their family, showing Christos that real estate could provide him both a good life and the ability to deliver superb service with heart to clients.

What started as a simple visit to Chicago in 1994 ended up being the start of something new.

"This city's energy—bold, fast-paced, and unstoppable—was a great match for my open and driven personality," Christos recalls. "Calling it home felt easy and natural for me."

What followed was far from simple. Starting over in a new place, and still a new country to him, meant building everything from scratch. Christos didn't know many people, and his English was limited at the time. Being far from family made the early years personally and professionally challenging, too. But he leaned on the qualities that had always come naturally to him: resilience, determination, and drive, as well as his outgoing personality.

"I focused on building relationships and learning by doing," he says. "Over time, those difficult beginnings became the foundation of my success. A critical part of that journey was my wife, Olga, whose constant support, guidance, and belief in me helped me stay focused during the toughest moments."

Prior to earning his real estate license in 2001, Christos studied real estate appraisal at a US college while working in the restaurant and hospitality industry, which also complemented his high-energy disposition and social personality. He knew moving into real estate was a natural next step.

"With my fast-paced nature, curiosity about people, and natural ability to connect, real estate became more than a career path," Christos says. "It became the perfect fit for who I am."

Today, twenty-five years later, he feels as at ease and as passionate about real estate as ever. Christos is adamant about staying ahead of the market to create smarter real estate solutions for his clients and community. For Christos, it's all about the people he works with.

"The most rewarding part of my business has been the relationships," Christos says. "I love earning my clients' trust, building real connections with them, and seeing their excitement when the right deal comes together. The real reward is knowing I helped someone change their life, invest in their future, and find a place to call home."

That perspective extends beyond business and into the work he does in the community. Christos stays closely connected to his heritage and currently serves as president of an ancestral non-profit organization, and he has served on the boards of two others. The work focuses on preserving Greek cultural heritage for future generations and supporting causes both locally and in Greece.

“It’s a meaningful way to give back, help when you can, and stay connected with your roots,” he says.

Outside of real estate and his community involvement, Christos is all about his family. Christos and Olga are raising two daughters—in the north suburban community they call home. Olga is an educator whose patience, organization, and steady support have been instrumental throughout Christos’s journey. Their two teenage daughters keep the family calendar full. Between responsibilities, commitments, and activities, the family prioritizes time together whenever possible.

With his work, at the core of everything Christos does is the conviction that real estate is ultimately about human connection.

“In an industry and a world that are moving faster every year, I’ve learned that sometimes slowing down gives you the real competitive edge,” he says. “We work with people. Technology and information will continue to evolve, but they will never replace trust, empathy, and human intuition. There is no substitute for real conversations, reading a room, or understanding someone’s fears, motivations, and excitement.”

Christos has held those beliefs since he began in real estate over two decades ago, and they continue to guide the future he’s building.

“My advice to the next top producer is simple: show up, keep your word, listen more than you speak, and protect the relationship above the deal.”

As for Christos, he’ll keep the same priceless, key principle he always has for his clients, family, and community: you can count on him to always show up. ▀

Yael Rajstein

WITH YR STUDIO

Where Life Unfolds

For Yael Rajstein, design begins with something deeper than aesthetics. It begins with emotion. It is about creating spaces that evoke comfort, joy, and belonging—an integration of art, architecture, and life.

As the founder of YR Studio, an architectural design firm specializing in distinctive residential and commercial spaces, Yael approaches every project as a fully integrated experience:

architecture and interiors are conceived together from the beginning, allowing proportion, materials, functionality, and lifestyle to align into one cohesive vision.

“Our work extends beyond drawings,” Yael emphasizes. “We are deeply involved in the technical and aesthetic layers of every project, from spatial planning to construction collaboration to custom millwork, finish curation, and furnishing integration.”

Yael’s holistic perspective on design was shaped long before she launched her studio. She grew up in an Argentinian household in Jerusalem, a city teeming with architecture layered with centuries of history. Frequent travel to Europe and visits to family in Argentina expanded her perspective, showing her how architecture reflects culture, identity, and story.

“I vividly remember the way light filtered through Jerusalem’s limestone walls and the emotion each space evoked,” she recalls.

Creativity was always part of Yael’s life. By the age of four she was painting and sculpting, and like many future architects, she gravitated toward building—rarely following the Lego instructions, always designing something of her own.

Yael came to the United States on a music scholarship to Brandeis University, where she studied flute performance while also completing physics and sculpture courses to prepare for architecture school. That creative drive eventually led her to earn her master of architecture degree from Washington University in St. Louis.

After graduate school she moved to Chicago to work at a prominent architecture firm, determined to establish herself in the profession. Her mother, a devoted single parent and educator, instilled the discipline and resilience that continue to guide how Yael leads her business today.

It was becoming a mother that first sparked the creation of YR Studio—initially not as an architectural firm, but as an art studio.

“When my first daughter was born, I returned to painting,” Yael explains. “Over time, after years of working in residential architecture and design-build environments, I recognized an opportunity to create something more intentional: a firm grounded not only in strong design, but also in a better client experience.”

In 2020, YR Studio was officially launched as an architectural design studio. What distinguishes Yael’s work is the way she blends architecture, interior design, and art into one cohesive narrative. “I see spaces not only structurally, but also emotionally and artistically,” she says. YR Studio still operates an art studio within the now larger firm, producing custom pieces for residences, restaurants, and other hospitality projects. This integration allows each project to be and feel unique and deeply personal.

“My work begins with understanding how my clients define beauty, comfort, and safety—what makes them feel grounded, inspired, and fully themselves,” she says. It’s a skill and approach aided by her global experience, perspective, and deep sensitivity to cultural nuance.

“When designers
collaborate, we elevate the client
experience.”

For REALTORS®, that perspective can be particularly valuable. Yael partners with agents to help both residential and commercial clients envision the full potential of a home or space while they are still deciding whether the property is the right fit. Bringing a designer into the process early can reduce uncertainty and help buyers see possibilities they might otherwise miss.

“When designers and REALTORS® collaborate, we elevate the client experience,” she explains. “We can assess the home’s true potential, identify how it can be personalized, and help clients envision themselves in the space.”

Outside of work, family remains the center of Yael’s life. She and her husband, Dr. Scott Drucker, have three children—Maya, Ethan, and Liam—and share a love of travel and exploring new places together. Whether it’s hiking in the Rockies, discovering neighborhoods around Chicago, or traveling internationally, Yael admits she inevitably turns every trip into a bit of an architectural history lesson.

At home, that same creative spirit often shows up in the kitchen. “I cook with the same passion I design with—bold, soulful, and ‘a little extra,’” she says with a laugh. For Yael, food and design work hand in hand: “Design shapes spaces, cooking fills them with life.”

In the end, Yael sees success as living with purpose and creating work that brings meaning to others. “When clients tell me their home brings them joy and comfort, and that the process felt thoughtful and enjoyable, that’s incredibly rewarding,” she says.

Because for Yael Rajstein, the goal of design has never been just to build beautiful spaces; it’s to create places where life unfolds. ❏

GRACE FLATT

IN SYNC

Grace Flatt knows what it means to put in the time to succeed and the rewards of dedication, patience, and resilience. Today, twenty-six years into her real estate career, she isn't slowing down. She's hitting a new stride.

"I feel like this is the start of my Golden Era," she says.

What makes this moment even more meaningful is that she's sharing this knowing of being at a new level and stage of her career with the two women she loves most. Grace's two teen daughters, Elizabeth and Ellen, are enjoying being in this same place in their careers: both are competing at the highest levels of synchronized skating, earning national titles and stepping onto the international stage.

"We are all earning top honors at the same time right now," Grace says. "And we are enjoying the ride, but it was not easy to get here."

That idea—that nothing happens overnight—has shaped everything for Grace. Growing up in Forest Glen on Chicago's northwest side, she was a competitive gymnast on the Wilmette team from ages eight to eighteen. "I committed to many hours in the gym and never gave up," she says. "I became mentally and physically tough."

Because many of her teammates lived there, Grace ended up spending a lot of time in North Shore. She fell in love with Gillson Beach and dreamed about living in the many beautiful homes she saw.

After graduating with a degree in pre-med biology from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, she "stumbled" into marketing at an international consulting firm. Surrounded by coworkers who were new to Chicago, she naturally became the local expert, helping them find the best places to eat, neighborhoods to live in, and where to spend their time.

When a colleague suggested she'd make a good REALTOR®, the idea stuck. "I thought it would be a fun way to earn extra money on the weekends," she says. "After a couple years, I was ready to make real estate my main focus. It is a privilege to advise people on such an important part of their life. Home is the center of family life and family is everything."

For Grace, that belief isn't just something she says; it's something she's lived. Her mother, who immigrated from Italy as a child with her family in search of a better life and eventually became a beloved teacher and principal in Evanston, has always been a central figure in Grace's life and one of her biggest supporters. Just two years ago, her mother suffered a stroke. Grace spent weeks by her side and continued supporting her through a long recovery. A year after that difficult season, Grace set herself a goal for her twenty-fifth year in real estate and achieved her best year yet with over $48M in sales as a single agent, which included selling one of the top-ten highest-priced homes sold in Illinois.

Elizabeth and Ellen have long embraced their mother and grandmother’s mindset and work ethic. Both started skating at ages four and three respectively, and became highly committed to the sport. Years of early morning practices, long drives to competitions, and constant training led to both becoming US National Champions. Elizabeth is also competing internationally for Team USA.

Watching their resilience up close—especially when Ellen fought back from a serious injury, that had kept her off the ice for months, to win a national title—has only reinforced what Grace has always believed. “The best things in life take time and commitment,” she says.

Commitment and resilience came to fruition again this past year when Grace’s mother traveled to Boston to watch Elizabeth compete internationally. “We were not sure this would happen after her stroke left her right side numb, but we made it happen and it was amazing,” Grace says.

Today, Grace lives in Winnetka with her husband, Will, and their daughters—it’s the same North Shore area she once dreamed about as a kid, and a place she now fully enjoys with her family. She has spent years supporting and volunteering at her daughters’ schools, as well as their synchronized skating teams.

“I love spreading the word about synchronized skating and hope to see it become an Olympic sport in 2030,” Grace says. “It will be included in the Junior Olympics in 2028, so this is exciting.”

When she’s not working or advocating for the sport, she enjoys walking her yellow lab, Goldie, along Lake Michigan, shopping, boating, skiing, seeing live music, doing yoga, and spending time with family and friends.

Focusing back on her career, she says, “I feel successful when I’m achieving my clients’ goals; when I am working to my maximum capacity; when I reach a new milestone or goal; when I stick with a plan, even if it takes a while, and follow through; and when I can contribute in a meaningful way to my family’s future.”

Looking ahead, Grace isn’t about to slow down any time soon. Because for her, this isn’t about a finish line. It’s about staying in rhythm. And right now, everything—from her business to her family—is moving in sync. “I’m loving every minute,” she says. “It’s a wonderful feeling to love what I do and to watch my daughters skating their hearts out on the ice, our home away from home.”

Sheila Doyle

RELATIONSHIPS COME FIRST

FOR SHEILA DOYLE, REAL ESTATE FEELS LIKE A NATURAL EXTENSION OF WHO SHE HAS ALWAYS BEEN.

“I have always been involved in sales,” she says. “From selling Girl Scout cookies to working in retail, it’s just something that’s always been part of who I am.”

Sheila might have started in real estate right after graduating from college: her father worked in commercial real estate and had asked her to join him. But she decided against it. “We were too much alike,” she explains, laughing. It was a decision that gave her space to build something on her own.

Sheila spent many years in the office products industry, selling to large Fortune 500 companies. The competitive and dynamic work environment gave her the kind of experience that sharpened both her instincts and her work ethic. Over time, though, things began to change.

“I worked on commission and the final straw came the year I sold more yet made 25 percent less,” she says. It was a turning point. The effort was there, but the outcome was no longer hers to control.

Real estate offered her a different path. “It was a phenomenal business opportunity to use my sales skills and not be beholden to a company’s financial whims,” she says. “And I really enjoy working with people and helping them with all of their real estate needs.”

More than two decades later, that mindset still defines how she approaches her work. Ask Sheila what stands out most about her career, and she does not talk about numbers. She talks about people: “It’s all the friends I have made along the way among clients, agents, vendors, and attorneys,” she says.

Fostering those relationships, many of the connections she’s made over the years have lasted well beyond the closings. Over time, trust has turned into something more meaningful, with past clients continuing to reach out long after the transaction is complete.

“I strive to have clients for life,” she says. “I want them to call me with any questions and be their go-to for all real estate inquiries.”

Sheila brings that same openness to others in the industry. New agents often find their way to her for guidance, and she is always willing to share what she has learned.

“I always encourage new agents to get a coach and to keep asking questions. But the advice I give most often is ‘Be the solution [for your clients],’” shares Sheila. Her advice and insights are shaped by her years of experience and willingness to keep learning.

Outside of work, Sheila keeps things simple in the best way. She enjoys traveling, trying new restaurants, reading, and spending time with her partner, Dennis, friends, and neighbors. Some of her favorite moments are the quiet ones like relaxing by the pool or sharing a meal with those she loves. She also enjoys volunteering for Habitat for Humanity and she supports the Andrea Bocelli Foundation. “It’s a great organization that helps children all over the world,” she says.

As her philanthropic interest implies, Sheila also has a love for music—Adele is one of her favorite artists—and live performance. That love is reflected in a vision she has that reflects her sense of humor.

“If I ever retire, I want to go to senior residences in a red sequined dress, lay on a piano, and sing my heart out,” she says. “I better get started on voice lessons.”

But that vision for the future is far, far off yet. Sheila isn’t planning to slow down: “I want to keep working, traveling, and having a great life,” she says.

It is a straightforward outlook, and one that mirrors how she has built her career: by staying consistent, taking care of people, and letting the rest follow.

In a business that often moves quickly, Sheila Doyle has built something steady. Not by overcomplicating it, but by doing the fundamentals well and consistently. ▀

Why Video Will Define Real Estate Marketing in 2026

In 2026, the most successful real estate brands won't be the loudest—they'll be the most impactful.

Today's buyers and sellers don't just want to see properties. They want to feel the lifestyle, understand the story, and connect with the people behind the brand. High-impact video content transforms listings into experiences, agents into brands, and transactions into narratives.

One of the biggest shifts in 2026 is the move from generic listing videos to intentional storytelling. Cinematic visuals, authentic testimonials, and behind-the-scenes moments are outperforming traditional marketing because they create emotional resonance—not just awareness.

Impact also means longevity. A single well-crafted brand film can influence perception for years, while short-form reels drive daily engagement across social platforms. Together, they create a layered strategy that amplifies visibility, credibility, and conversion.

In a world where everyone can create content, impact is no longer about having more video—it's about having the right video.

For real estate professionals looking ahead, the future is clear:

Don't just market homes. Create impact.
